Francis Joseph Celebrates His Diamond Jubilee.

Festivities in Dual Empire Begin with Church Services.

VIENNA, Dec. 2.—The dual empire is today celebrating the diamond jubilee of the accession of Francis Joseph to the throne. His Majesty became Emperor of Austria and King of Hungary December 2, 1848, on the abdication of his uncle, Ferdinand I.

Masses and special Te Deum services in the cathedral and the churches of Vienna marked the beginning of the program of festivities. His majesty was present at the service in the Hofburg chapel. As he drove through the streets in an open carriage, attended by members of the imperial house, he was greeted everywhere with cheers from the people who crowded the streets.

At the conclusion of this service His Majesty received the felicitations of the members of his family, and also of deputations from civil bodies, military establishments, etc.

MEETING POORLY ATTENDED.

English Recommendation for American Tariff to Be Forwarded.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The meeting held here today at the instance of the London Chamber of Commerce, at which the government was to be urged to act in the interests of British commerce to secure favorable changes in the American tariff, was poorly attended and no large interests were represented. The chief objections raised by those present to the American tariff were in the matter of the extra duties levy, but the speakers differed regarding the methods to be recommended to bring about a remedy of the alleged injustices. One of the merchants present thought the United States should be asked to impose a straight ad valorem duty, while others were in favor of specific duties. The recommendation will be forwarded to the American government through the board of trade.

The maiden name of the princess was Estelle Alexander. She came from San Francisco. As Mrs. Veit she married the prince in Chicago in 1896. The prince's father was opposed to the union, and succeeded in having the Chicago marriage declared void by a French court. Following this action the prince re-married Mrs. Veit, under the French law.

COUNT INSPIRED BY DEEP HATRED.

Facts He Has Offered to Prove Are Irrelevant.

Clemenceau Presents Princess de Sagan's Side of Case.

PARIS, Dec. 2.—The suit brought by Count Boni de Castellane against the Princess de Sagan, his former wife, for the custody of his three children was continued in this city today. At the first hearing last week, counsel for the count declared that the moral atmosphere of the de Sagan household was harmful to the children, and that, therefore, they should be placed in the custody of Marquise de Castellane, the count's mother.

The court room today was more crowded than last week. M. Clemenceau, in presenting the princess's side of the case, emphasized the fact that the courts of France always had decided that a second marriage did not affect the rights of parents with regard to their children, even in cases where this second marriage was with the alleged accomplice in adultery. M. Clemenceau then summed up the contentions of the princess as follows:

The count has formally declared that he would withdraw the suit if the princess separated from her husband. The facts that the count has offered to prove are irrelevant, and even if they were established they have no bearing upon the education of the children. Furthermore, these allegations are denied by the princess. The count is inspired less by solicitude for the welfare of his children than by personal hatred and financial considerations. The princess, since her marriage to her present husband, has fulfilled in every way her duty toward her children. She has not sought to alienate their affections from their father. On the other hand, the count has committed the unpardonable fault of bringing out the present scandal, to the detriment of the children; he has used language which "humiliated" their tutor, and in letters to them he has called de Sagan a bandit. M. Clemenceau then denied that de Sagan since his marriage, has in any way interfered with the education of the children; consequently, he asked the court to take into consideration the princess's expressed declaration that she never had opposed, and would not oppose in the future, the exercise of the count's legal rights over the education of the children, provided, only, that he did not attempt to poison their minds, and to dismiss the suit.

Continuing, M. Clemenceau announced that the princess formally joined with her husband in the allegations against the count numbered from 1 to 20 inclusive. These deal with de Sagan's charges that the count, in order to prevent the marriage of Madame Gould with the Prince de Sagan, caused forged letters and documents purporting to have been signed by de Sagan, to be sent to Mme. Gould. The count claimed that these documents had been left anonymously at his residence during September, 1907. De Sagan, while not directly accusing the count of forgery, offered to prove by experts that these documents were forged "by the same hand."

M. Clemenceau said that certain affirmations must be met, notably Mme. Gould's alleged remark that it would have been better if she had not been divorced, but had lived as she pleased, though married. What Mme. Gould actually said, M. Clemenceau declared, was: "I am treated just as if I had a lot of lovers."

Counsel for the princess ruled the count fore and aft when he reached the subject of the reckless fashion in which he had dissipated his wife's fortune, spending at the rate of $1,000,000 a year for 11 years. "So long as the money was forthcoming," M. Clemenceau said, "The count considered his wife upright and honorable." When Miss Gould was married to de Castellane she had a yearly income of $750,000. During her married life $10,000,000 had been spent. When she obtained her divorce from the count debts amounting to $3,400,000 existed in addition to the sum of $50,000 which had been given to the Marquis and Marquise de Castellane.

"This is the man," cried M. Clemenceau, "who wants his children educated like a de Castellane; a man without a profession, who married for money, and then devoted himself to betraying his wife with his wife's female friends. Contrast him with George Gould, the brother of the princess. 'Here is a true man, who has devoted his energies to improving his railroads in order to get the products to the markets of the world.'"

M. Clemenceau revealed the exact terms of the settlement his client offered to make at the time of her divorce. These the count refused as insufficient, and, in so doing, proved himself eligible for an insane asylum. These terms were $200,000 in cash and an income of $50,000 a year, this income to be increased when the estate of his client was out of the hands of the trustee. Mme. Gould to take over all the debts then pending. M. Clemenceau then railed at the court for reproaching de Sagan with having two mistresses. "The count," he said, "had more than two when he married Miss Gould."

Reverting to the divorce proceedings, M. Clemenceau charged that the words of the decree obtained by the countess, that "the husband had entertained relations with women of easy morals," did not constitute the worst charge against the count.

As proof that the suit was not through the interest of the count's solicitude for his children, and that the Marquise de Castellane did not desire their custody, M. Clemenceau called attention to the fact that the marquis has not come forward as a part to the action.

M. Clemenceau then took up the accusations made against the princess by the count regarding her travels in Italy with de Sagan before their marriage. It should be remembered, the lawyer declared, that the princess was not a young girl traveling with her fiance, but a divorced woman in the company of the man she was going to marry. Furthermore, she was an American, M. Clemenceau said, and added, "conduct that would appear to be out of the ordinary in France is perfectly proper on the other side of the ocean."

In conclusion, M. Clemenceau gave many instances of the long months of solitude of the princess.

ARCHBOLD PLIED WITH QUESTIONS.

Asked as to Percentage of Standard's Business.

Kellogg Tries to Show Motive to Destroy Competition.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—When cross-examination of John D. Archbold was resumed in the Standard Oil suit today Mr. Archbold was asked about the percentage of business done by the Standard interests in 1879. He said he could state that it was a large percentage.

Mr. Kellogg, for the government, called attention to evidence given several years ago by H. H. Rogers, that in 1879 the Standard and its affiliated interests produced 90 to 95 per cent of refined oil. "If you had that amount of production do you still say, as stated by you yesterday, that you acquired the plants on the seaboard to increase your volume of business?"

"I can't say what percentage of business we were doing."

Mr. Kellogg was seeking to show that in reality the Standard did not purchase certain seaboard refineries to increase the Standard's business, but to obtain the plants and dismantle them, thereby destroying competition. The government prosecutor piled the witness with many questions to develop the prosecutor's contention.

Mr. Kellogg read a statement purporting to give the percentages of domestic business of the Standard between 1894 and 1898, which averaged about 80 per cent.

"Assuming that the Standard did 82 per cent in 1895, why did you acquire additional refineries?"

"That was done to succeed to their business."

Mr. Kellogg endeavored to show that the Standard, instead of developing its own business by its own efforts, took over competitors, and in that way increased its own business.

Mr. Kellogg brought to the attention of the witness several independent companies in which the Standard obtained a majority of the stock, but which continued to be operated by their original owners.

Mr. Archbold said that J. C. Sibley organized the Signal Oil Company of Franklin, Pa., and General Charles Miller developed the Galena Oil Company. Later the Standard bought both companies and combined them as the Galena-Signal Oil Company which continued under the direction of Mr. Sibley and General Miller. Both Mr. Sibley and General Miller held minority interests in the company, said Mr. Archbold. The vice president of the Standard said that in 1881 he had acquired control of the Empire Refining Company, and held the stock for the benefit of the Standard's stockholders.

Mr. Kellogg said that the J. C. Sibley referred to was the Congressman from Pennsylvania.

Recess was then taken for luncheon.

AMENDING BANKING LAWS.

Cortelyou and Coolidge Examined by Monetary Commission.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Secretary Cortelyou and Assistant Secretary Coolidge today appeared before the national monetary commission. Mr. Cortelyou was examined concerning suggestions for amendments to correct defects in administrative features of the banking laws. The recent financial panic and the effect on certain banking institutions furnished the basis for most of Mr. Cortelyou's observations to the committee. Comptroller of the Currency Murray offered suggestions for amendments to the banking laws governing methods of bank exchanges.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Engineer Whitcher of Train in South Boston Collision Arrested.

BOSTON, Dec. 2.—Thomas W. Whitcher of Braintree, engineer on the second train which figured in the collision in the South Boston yards of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad Saturday night, was arrested at the South Terminal Station today, charged with murder. Since the accident the city and county authorities in connection with the railroad management have been investigating the circumstances of the accident, and it is alleged that Whitcher's arrest today is the principal result of that investigation.

The warrant for the arrest of Whitcher was issued by Judge Fallon in the South Boston police court after he had heard a statement by Captain Dugan, chief of the bureau of criminal investigation. Captain Dugan told Judge Fallon that his investigations had established that Whitcher ran his train past a signal which had been set against him. Captain Dugan personally made the arrest, accompanied by Sergeant Henry Hazlett. The warrant charges Whitcher with murder in causing the death of William Buchanan, brakeman, and George Schools, ticket collector.

Engineer Whitcher is 42 years of age, and is not married. He has been an engineer for the New Haven road for about 14 years.

After being brought to police headquarters for a brief examination Whitcher was taken to Station 6, in South Boston. He will not be brought into court until tomorrow. During tonight he will be kept either at Station 6 or in the Charles street jail, as bail will not be accepted.

ROOSEVELT'S WEDDING DAY.

President Extra Busy with Duties at White House and Elsewhere.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt today celebrated in a quiet way the anniversary of their marriage in St. George's Church, London, 22 years ago.

The President had a busier day than usual. Besides attending to his official duties at the White House, he went in the morning to the celebration at St. Patrick's Church of the sixtieth anniversary of the Austrian emperor's accession to the throne, and in the afternoon he received the Chinese special envoy and suite in the East Room of the White House.

PORT AU PRINCE PEOPLE REVOLT.

Establish Government, with Legitime as President.

Infuriated Mob Insists That Alexis Leave the Country.

PORT AU PRINCE, Hayti, Dec. 2.—The people of Port au Prince have revolted against the government, and are in possession of the city. There has been no fighting with the government troops. A provisional government has been established, and General Legitime has accepted the presidency of the new administration. General Legitime was at one time president of the republic.

The palace is surrounded by an infuriated mob, calling upon Alexis to leave the country. Almost everybody in the crowd is armed. Haytian women, beside themselves with rage, are calling down curses on the head of the aged man who was today deposed from the presidency of the republic, and hurling coarse epithets at him and his family. If Nord Alexis persists in his stubborn determination not to leave the capital while he still has the chance, he will be in grave danger of attack, not to say death, at the hands of his people.

General Canal is doing everything possible to maintain order. The guards of the streets have been increased, but it is with great difficulty that the populace is being restrained. Already the people are beginning to pillage the central market, and rifle firing is heard from that section of the city as this despatch is filed. A butcher in the market tried to protect his stall from the looters, and he was at once killed.

Sailors from the American cruisers are at present in the American legation, where they are arranging a system of signals between the legation and

Many Students Wounded in a Conflict at Weinberg.

PRAGUE, Austria, Dec. 2. Martial law was proclaimed in this city today. This action on the part of the government served greatly to exasperate the Czech students of Prague, and they forthwith started rioting. There was a sanguinary conflict between them and police and gendarmes at Weinberg, a suburb of Prague, in which many students were wounded.

It had been hoped that it would not be necessary to mar the jubilee of the anniversary of Emperor Francis Joseph's accession to the throne by such drastic steps, but the continued rioting between the Czechs and the Germans of Prague forced the government to issue the proclamation.

The Austrian parliament will begin its fall session at Vienna tomorrow, and the Czech deputies threaten to make trouble for the new cabinet organized by Dr. Von Bienerth, for having consented to the attack upon parliamentary institutions involved by the declaration of martial law.

NEW BEDFORD "DRY."

Marlboro Another Massachusetts City to Vote for No-License.

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—New Bedford voted for no-license today for the first time in many years, the anti-saloon forces carrying the city by 134 plurality after a hot campaign. Last year, with some of the saloon keepers actively supporting the no-license fight the plurality in favor of liquor selling was less than 100 votes. Today this same element was said to be openly advocating a "dry" vote.

Seven of the 33 cities in the commonwealth held their annual elections today and the chief issue in all of them was the liquor question. In Northampton and Fitchburg particularly warm contests were waged. These two cities voted to continue the sale of liquor, but by reduced majorities. Waltham and Quincy, strong no-license towns, repeated last year's verdict today and Pittsfield again voted for license.

In Marlboro a license majority of 631 last year was turned into a majority of 33 for no-license.

With the exception of Fitchburg, where M. Frederick O'Connell, Independent Citizens' candidate, was chosen, the cities re-elected their present mayors.

The weather was fine and warm and a heavy vote was polled, especially in New Bedford, Marlboro, Fitchburg and Northampton. Following is a summary of the elections:

The seizure was a legal formality, resulting from the government's recent action in filing suit for the confiscation of the property.

THE AGE OF NIAGARA FALLS.

[New York Tribune.]

In the current issue of "Science" Professor J. W. Spencer defends an opinion advanced last year, but recently disputed by other geologists, concerning the length of time during which America's best known cataract has existed. His estimate of the interval is 55,000 years, which is considerably more than that of Professor George F. Wright, who makes it 7,000 years, but far less than Professor Grove K. Gilbert's estimate of about 150,000 years.

All attempts to solve this fascinating problem are based on a well established fact. As the Niagara river is undermining the ledge over which it tumbles, and as the uppermost stratum of rock breaks away in consequence, the position of the falls is continually changing. It is now fully seven miles from the vicinity of Lewiston, where the shelf terminates. Obviously, if the history of the cataract dates from the time when it began to eat its way backward from that point—an assumption which is probably warranted—and if the retreat has been at a uniform rate, computation of the age of the falls would be a comparatively simple task. Since the late Professor James Hall charted their position, in 1842, they have receded 250 feet, an average of about four feet annually.

THE "MOTOR MIND."

Divests Itself of Several of the Most Admirable Attributes of Cultivated Humanity.

[New York Tribune.]

We have long heard of "sea legs," of writer's cramp," of "housemaid's knee," of the bicyclist's "hump"—kyphosis bicyclistarum, we ourselves called it—and various other physical idiosyncrasies, resulting from certain habits of life, labors, or practices. To the catalogue it seems probable that we shall now have to add another item, to wit, the "motor mind." By that we mean the more or less habitual condition of mind into which certain automobilists get, apparently because of and through their indulgence in the fascinating practice of operating motor cars. There might at first sight be room for questioning which was the cause and which the effect; whether the "motor mind" was the result of running automobiles, or whether the peculiar style of running automobiles was the result of the prepossession of the "motor mind." But reflection upon the character of that mind and a decent regard for the repute of humanity must incline us toward the former theory.

The "motor mind," then however acquired, divests its possessor of several of the most admirable and desirable attributes of cultivated humanity. One of these is prudence. The unhappy victim of this mental peculiarity becomes reckless in the extreme. Over roads which the normal man would traverse with caution in broad daylight he hesitates not to rush at frantic speed in the darkest midnight. At a speed which other would regard as perilous and to be made only for urgent need on wheels of steel running on fixed tracks of steel from which all other traffic is rigidly excluded, he travels for no need save that of idle caprice on vulnerable tires of rubber along roads without fixed tracks and traversed by other vehicles. It is to be doubted if the records of human recklessness contain account of any lack of caution or of common care for safety comparable with that of the possessor of the "motor mind."

Still more noteworthy, and still more agreeable, is the abatement of pity, mercy and all humane sentiments which follows in the train of this disorder. The normal impulse of a man is not only to avoid injuring another, but also, in case of the infliction of injury, to inquire solicitously as to its extent and to endeavor to give all possible aid and make all possible reparation. All this is changed immediately upon the development of "motor mind." The distress, the peril, even the grievous injury, of another become matter for indifference, if not for actual mirth. If a hapless wayfarer, even on a lonely road, is run down and disabled or killed, the victim of "motor mind" never pauses a moment to render aid or to dispose decently the mangled remains, but rushes away as madly as ever, as if in quest of another victim, leaving the stricken one to suffer or the crushed corpse to be the prey of the elements.

It is impossible to contemplate without a mingling of pity and horror the possession of so abominable a mind as that which can prompt such deeds, or can even permit its owner to hurry heartlessly away from the scene of tragedy. The knowledge that such minds do exist, however, and are apparently increasing in number, so as to form a perceptible though happily still very small percentage of those of all automobile drivers, suggests a new and important field for the observation, research and action of alienists and also of penologists.

PARENTAL TITLES.

The Words "Mother" and "Father" are Fine and Natural, Teeming with Love and Strength.

[New York Sun.]

"I was brought up," said Mr. Fatherly, "to say mother and father. As far as I can recollect I never said mamma or papa, and what fine, natural, wholesome homely words, teeming with strength and love and affection, father and mother are.

"Then in the course of time I grew up and got married, and we had children, and our children started in calling us not father and mother, but mamma and papa, pronounced in the most natural and easy way, with the accent on the first syllable, mommer and popper.

"I don't know just how our children, whose parents in their childhood had always said father and mother, came thus to say mamma and papa, but we are not objecting; they may have been taught so by their nurse or they may have absorbed it from people, young and old, of the neighborhood.

"Then as the children grew older and came to exercise their own intelligence they came to pronounce these words correctly, mamma and papa, with the accent on the last syllable; and they were very careful and precise about this under all ordinary circumstances, but when they got excited and didn't stop to think they went back to mommer and popper, which I am free to say I liked much better. Mamma and papa, with the accent on the last syllable, always seem poor and artificial words to me.

"And then another interesting thing happened. As our children grew older—guided by the same acuteness that had prompted them to get mamma and papa correctly now, but with a broad intelligence—they discovered and adopted as parental titles the words mother and father. I am not so sure but what at first they did this because they considered it to be the fashionably correct fashion, better form; but mother and father came finally to appeal to them perfectly, and ever since they have used them unaffectedly and naturally, with pa and ma occasionally as affectionate diminutives.

"But now here is a curious thing. Our children are pretty well grown up now, young men and young women, our boys and girls are now, and now suppose that one of the girls, say, should be affrighted in her sleep by some terrible dream, so that she calls aloud for help. And then whom do you suppose she calls for? Why, instinctively she calls for her mother, as all children do, but in what manner do you suppose the affrighted, dreaming girl calling for help, calls to her mother? Does she shout 'Mother!' or 'Mamma!' with the accent on the last syllable? Truth she says neither, but what she now says is:

"'Mommer! Mommer! Mommer!'

"You see? The early habit persists, and I suppose we shall have to wait for another generation until our grandchildren come for children in whose minds the lovely words, by constant use from infancy up, have once more become so firmly fixed that they will say 'Mother!' instinctively and always, even in their dreams."

"THE MAN WHO ENDED WAR."

Strange Tale of the Destruction of Battleships by a Mysterious Inventor.

"The Man Who Ended War" by [illegible] Godfrey is [illegible] It deals with a man who believes [illegible] to [illegible] governments that war must cease and if they do not disarm their fleets he will destroy every battleship in the world. This is taken as the work of a crank or an insane man and no attention is paid to it, until one fine morning the world wakes up and finds that an American battleship has disappeared from the face of the earth. What is more, an eye-witness is found who saw the vessel suddenly [illegible] while he was gazing at it. From this point on a young American newspaper man, a charming girl and her brother begin their search for the man who was trying to stop war. The scene changes from Washington to New York, to London, to Folkestone, on the English channel, and to the [illegible] beyond Scheveningen, and back again to America.

Two of the party are especially well equipped in scientific knowledge for the work before them, Dorothy Haldane and her brother Tom. They come to the conclusion that the man has some radio-active generator, whose waves destroy the ships. With this as a basis, they try to solve the problem, and in doing so have many strange experiences. The climax of the story is reached when the newspaper correspondent sees 80 warships, as they are about to engage in battle, disappear one after another, silently and noiselessly, without explosion or sound of any kind. This wholesale destruction of men and ships brings about the desired end, and within a few days after this terrible disaster peace is declared and the work of disarmament of all the navies begins. "The man" had gained his object.

It is a book which will no doubt create much comment, because of the subject with which it deals. The possibility of such a state of affairs as narrated by the author is small, but it makes an entertaining story and will be enjoyed by all who read it.

[Little, Brown & Co.]

IN DARKEST SOUTH AMERICA.

An Exceedingly Rich Region Which Will Some Day Support Millions of People.

[W. T. Barns in the Outing Magazine.]

We continued until reaching the river Tambopata, with which the Tavora mates a broad and beautiful union and marks the point where we left the last low hills and entered the vast expanse of the Amazon Basin. Great dense forest extended in all directions, rendered almost impenetrable by myriads of "bejucos" (tendrils), climbing vines, cane and bamboo. Thousands of orchids clung to the trees and countless insects furnished natural music, swelled by the songs and chirpings of vari-colored birds. Occasionally we sighted a band of monkeys, some little furry fellows that one could place in a coat pocket, and big brown "howling" monkeys one of which would furnish a meal for a dozen men. These howling monkeys have an auxiliary larynx which acts as a sounding box and enables them to produce the most unearthly and continuous roar, really blood-curdling to one who is ignorant of its source. Many parrots and macaws flew back and forth across the river, adding their unmusical voices to the river's murmur and the soft hum of the forest. On one bank we found a deserted house of the savages, but nothing worth appropriating.

We then started down the Tambopata, getting over several rapids, and in a few hours sighted a naked native woman on a small raft. She set up a lusty yell for the camp of savages on the beach, and as we pulled up to the bank she came forward, offering gifts of bananas and plaintains. In the mean time a number of the tribe came running down to see us. This was our first meeting with the Indians, and it was with a thrill of excitement that we disembarked and walked with them up to their village, which consisted of a group of palm-leaf huts, temporary affairs of the most primitive type. After taking a few snapshots we left them and continued our journey along the broad and beautiful river.

We camped as usual on the sandy shore, generally having to search for a bare place large enough to pitch our tents, and slept well, notwithstanding the fatigue and persistent insect pests. Here and there along the river we saw small collections of bananas and yuccas growing in a seemingly natural state. Although the Indians enjoyed the produce, they evidently did not cultivate the plantations. The soil varied all along, from red clay to black loam, with occasionally an outcropping of hard conglomerate, the whole country seeming to rest without transitional substrata on silurian slate and plutonic rock. The entire region is exceedingly rich, supporting spontaneous fruits and heavy forests; has great possibilities and will some day support its millions of people.

The following day Glass killed a red deer and I caught a large fish, weighing about 12 pounds and also a bronze duck, so we were well supplied with fresh meat. Many days of our travel we were glad to get turkeys, ducks and monkeys when our provisions got low.

INCREASE IN NAVAL BOARDS.

Secretary Newberry Provides for Enlargement in the General and Construction Bodies.

Truman H. Newberry, who took the oath of office as Secretary of the Navy Monday, has altered the regulations of the Navy Department to allow an increase in the membership of the general board and the board of construction. Other minor changes in organization may later be recommended by Mr. Newberry.

At present the General Board comprises only seven members. The regulations limiting this board to seven officers have been changed, making it read, "And such other officers as the Secretary of the Navy may direct." By this new regulation Mr. Newberry believes he can assign such additional officers to the general board as will greatly facilitate the work and bring officers in closer touch with the work of the different bureaus.

The board of construction will also be increased. There has been considerable talk of making the general board permanent by a legal action, which will make it irrespective of the Secretary of the Navy. At present, however, this will not be done, but Mr. Newberry hopes that if the tentative plan of increasing the board proves satisfactory some action looking to making the board permanent will later be taken up.

CHINESE RUG BRINGS $75,000.

One of the finest Imperial Chinese rugs has been bought by J. Pierpont Morgan for a little less than $75,000. The rug was first brought to this country 12 years ago by the late Governor Winthrop Ames of Massachusetts. When his estate was being settled the rug was first included in the sale of the house, but the executors finally determined to put it on sale separately.

The dominating colors are yellow and blue. The central design is allegorical, representing the dragon which swallows the moon, as the Chinese explain an eclipse. Surrounding him are other and smaller dragons of similar type. At the bottom of the rug is a cloud design, made by overlapping semicircles. The border is the familiar Chinese one which suggests a Greek design. The entire rug is about 27 by 25 feet, and dates from the late sixteenth or early seventeenth century.

TAFT'S INAUGURATION.

The committee in charge is planning to make the inauguration of William H. Taft an event greater than any of its predecessors. Because of their experience with inaugurations in years past, Mr. Stellwagen, chairman of the inaugural committee, has selected as his personal advisers General John M. Wilson, U. S. A. (retired), Charles A. Bell and John Joy Edson. These three men have occupied the position of chairman of the inaugural committee and they have been called into consultation with the new chairman in the expectation that their advice will aid materially in carrying to success the elaborate programme that has been mapped out.

GYMNASIUM COMPETITION.

The first [illegible] of competitive [illegible] among the [illegible] classes at the Young Men's Christian Association took place Tuesday evening with a large number of competitors from the Junior Middle class. The competition consisted of a class calisthenic drill, Indian club exercises, wand drill and apparatus exercises on the parallel bars, the high parallels and horse. The contest was unusually keen and sharp, several of the members being given perfect marks on one or more parts. The various drills were watched with interest by a large number of relatives and friends of the boys and several from the older classes.

The judges were Messrs. Christopher P. Ward, William H. Carry, Joseph W. Blain and Percy L. Bailey and it took them a long time to arrive at a conclusion, Mr. Ward finally announcing the winners as follows: First, George Sullivan, with a mark of 51 points in a possible 60; second, Edward Holloway, with 49½ points, and third, William Peckham, with a mark of 19½ points. Two prizes were awarded a stick pin to the first and a knife to the second, with honorable mention for the third. While the judges were deciding, an interesting basket ball game was played by several of the class and others engaged in an obstacle race, "just for fun."

MAYOR BOYLE'S ELECTION.

The Daily News strongly opposed the candidacy of Mr. Boyle for mayor, for reasons which it plainly stated, and now regrets his election to that office. Yet we are disposed heartily to extend to him, and to the city under his administration, every good wish for his entire success during the coming year. Mr. Boyle has the natural ability and the familiarity with municipal affairs acquired by long experience which ought to make him a good mayor, and he owes it alike to himself and to his fellow citizens to be such. It may be hoped that some things which have been said, in public and in private, during the recent campaign may have such an influence that his administration of the office may prove a success to a degree which many have thought improbable.

CARNEGIE AND ROCKEFELLER.

The two richest men of whom we know anything, and probably the two richest men who ever lived, in comparison with whom Croesus was in moderate circumstances and Midas had no more than fair business capacity, are John D. Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie. The success of both has been phenomenal and both are moved by impulses which lie well outside and above the fields in which they have distinguished themselves more than all others.

Rockefeller is a religious man. He disclaims exclusive interest in money making and professes to be deeply concerned in the higher life and the brotherhood of man. He has given money with incredible liberality for the promotion of education and for scientific research. Carnegie is not a religious man, at least in any ecclesiastical sense; but he has declared the lofty sentiment that it is a disgrace to die rich and has given money with unprecedented generosity to promote technical education, to stimulate the intellectual life through libraries, to increase and to reward scholarship and to encourage heroism.

So far there is much in common between them. But their methods of attaining wealth have been diametrically opposed to each other. Rockefeller is the personification of combination and Carnegie the embodiment of competition. The whole philosophy of business on the part of Rockefeller is to suppress competition by securing control of competing establishments. We need not consider the disputed question of the methods used to gain his ends. He may be maligned, and he may be a commercial boa constrictor. But there is no dispute about the fact. He and his associates bent every energy to acquire competing plants, to associate rival enterprises, to trustee separate concerns, to eliminate the law of supply and demand, and to fix prices of crude oil and the refined product by a resolution at a meeting of a board of directors.

Carnegie's commercial philosophy has been to force competition. His aim was to produce more cheaply than anybody else. Instead of associating his rolling mills with other rolling mills, he sought to lower his cost of production and increase the independence of his position by producing the materials for his mills and manufacturing their product. Instead of extending his business laterally to take in his competitors, he extended it downward to the ore beds and the coal mines and coke furnaces and upward to the mills producing finished shapes, and made himself independent of the railroads as to a large part of his business by building a road from Lake Erie to his Homestead mills.

When pig iron was low and other producers were trying to form combinations to sustain prices he spent two millions in building two enormous blast furnaces, probably the largest which had then been built so that he could produce pig iron at less cost. Instead of joining the steel beam combination to suppress competition and fix the price of beams, he built the biggest beam mill in the world, produced beams cheaper than anybody else could, and broke up the combination. He was in the steel rail combination for a while, but quarreled with its management, cut prices and sold rails down to about $14, and declared that he could go still lower without losing money.

When there was a rage for great combinations or trusts, Carnegie rejected overtures to go into one, but sold an option on his plants. The buyer was unable to raise the money and Carnegie pocketed the amount paid for the option. He would not go into the Steel Corporation, and as there could not be any Steel Corporation without his works it was necessary to buy him out. There is a pretty widespread feeling that Carnegie has made his fortune by leading in the march of industrial progress, while Rockefeller has made his money out of the community, though it is true that in the course of years oil has been reduced in price and there has been admirable enterprise in improving methods, reducing costs and utilizing wastes.

WOMEN IN ENGLISH POLITICS.

It is only a few years ago that England, with her conservative idea of what women should or should not do, looked upon the so called "new woman" as a distinctly American product and considered her an unhappy consequence of too great freedom of ideas quite impossible under their institutions. Now the conditions are quite reversed and it is in England that the women have pushed farthest along new lines.

For years American women have been pleading for political rights, with little or no recognition by any authorities high in office, and it remained for England's king to open the way for this new movement. In a speech before Parliament a year ago the king said it was time women were taking part in the government of the nation and acting on this suggestion that body passed a measure by a large majority making women eligible to serve as mayors and aldermen. That the country was ready for this innovation and that public opinion was heartily in accord with it was shown by the fact that nine towns immediately elected women as aldermen and their service proved so satisfactory that at the next election two were nominated for the office of mayor. One was defeated, but the other, a woman of high standing in the country, was elected, and that she will be successful in her administration seems well assured.

Somehow, in thinking of the suffrage movement in this country, we are apt to have in mind, not the women of culture and refinement, but those of a less intellectual class who like to be conspicuous and take up this or any other new movement for the sake of bringing themselves before the public. In England it seems to bring to the front a more forceful, dignified and intellectual class of women than we find here in America in a similar position. For example, this new mayor, who ranks high in the medical profession, will bring to the office an experience of the physical, mental and spiritual needs of men, women and children, and the wide knowledge of public affairs which she is said to possess would fit her for administrative office in any city.

That her career will be closely observed and that there will be more women to take up this office hardly admits of doubt. There is a large measure of truth in what she told her constituents during her recent campaign, when she said that they were throwing away the resources of the country when they did not make use of capable women in public life. This instance may well lead us to ask if we fully realize how much farther the movement for the advancement of women has gone in England than in America, for we who pride ourselves on our progressiveness find that we do not really know the meaning of the word in this respect. England's example in this matter is a good one for us to watch, and might not be a bad one for us to follow under some conditions.

RIGHTS OF HOTEL GUESTS.

Hotel guests in New York are no longer absolutely at the mercy of the proprietors and their employes. A woman's bedroom was invaded at 1 A. M. by a hotel employe, who applied opprobrious epithets to her and ordered her out of the house. She sued the proprietor, and was defeated on the ground set forth by the appellate division of the supreme court, that while common carriers are obliged by the common law to protect their clients hotel keepers are under no obligation toward their guests. The court of appeals has reversed this and remanded the case for another trial, holding that, although cases might occur where hotel proprietors would not be responsible for insults or violence to their guests, they are at least responsible for their own acts and those of their employes who are ostensibly enforcing their own regulations. It shows, however, that hitherto hotel guests have been pretty well protected, that this controversy has turned up at the interpretation of an ancient case in the English courts.

A man who watches things carefully and does considerable good thinking in political canvasses was in the Daily News counting room Tuesday afternoon and spoke of the possible outcome of the three-cornered majority contest. Said he, taking a pencil and a piece of paper: "Let's mark." He did so, marking the total vote 4,666, Bliss 560, with the balance of 4,106 divided pretty equally between Clarke and Boyle, hoping that Clarke would lead. The count shows: Total vote 3960; Bliss 870, Clarke 1412, Boyle 1678. The vote of Clarke and Boyle was so nearly equal that 134 votes taken from Boyle's number would have elected Clarke.

The new Secretary of the Navy is beginning his work as head of the department by a re-organization of the general board, which is the source from which all changes in policy must come. The proposed re-organization is an important matter for the navy, as it means the addition to the governing board of several of the younger officers, who have advanced ideas in naval construction, and policy which will be of great service to the department.

The annual report of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shows that the percentage of foreign-born persons in the United States has remained practically stationary for 40 years. The percentage of foreign-born to the total population in 1860 was 13.2 and in 1900 13.7.

President-elect Taft has been assured that Speaker Cannon means to assist in bringing about a revision of the tariff which will meet the Republican party's pledges and win popular approval. With this assurance there is likely to be no opposition to Cannon's re-election by the new House of Representatives.

Probably, in view of the results of the election for mayor, even those who before the event could not or would not see it now realize that in a three-cornered fight the man whom they themselves least desire may be successful.

Patrick J. Boyle has been chosen mayor of Newport by the votes of 1,678 electors. But there are 2,282 voters in the city who prefer that another should fill that high office.

In New Bedford, which decided yesterday to go into the no-license column, the liquor business has been conducted in such a manner that a change from license was not unexpected.

Mayor Clarke will retire at the end of his term with the satisfaction of knowing that he has given Newport an excellent two years' administration of municipal affairs.

The provision of the new liquor law closing the saloons on election day worked admirably in Newport yesterday.

At all events, we now know whom a large part of the people of Newport prefer as their mayor.

A vote for Bliss was a vote for Boyle.

The triangular contest did it.

FILIPINO SUPERSTITIONS.

[Cebu Courier.]

In the Philippines, more perhaps than in any other country, the inhabitants believe in numerous superstitions. In many places the belief is so strong that with each every-day act and occurrence there is associated some superstitious belief.

To domesticate a cat, as soon as it is acquired, take it three times around the stove, then pull out one of its whiskers and bury it (the whisker, not the cat) in the ashes. The cat will never return to its former home.

When a wild cow is bought or obtained the new owner must lead it three times around the barn or other place where he desires it to sleep. He must then take from the animal's nose the loop by which it was led and bury it in some spot where the cow has circled. This must be done in the twilight. In the future the animal, without any guidance, will every evening promptly lie down in this very place when returning from the fields.

When the cornfields are visited by the small worms which greatly damage the crops the farmers have a peculiar way of destroying them without trouble. Without letting any one know, the farmer goes to the field, takes seven worms, strings them on a broken-eyed needle and then buries them in the seventh hill of the seventh row of corn. The worms will die out in numbers and in a couple of days the field will be free from them. This must be done secretly in the twilight or the charm will be broken.

Often a whole piece of bamboo is found in which black ants have made their nest, there being, however, no visible entry. Fishermen always hunt for this peculiar bamboo to assure themselves of good fishing. They use it as one of the frames in their fishing corral, and the presence of this bamboo charms the fish of the corral, and consequently a rich haul will be made.

Once I heard a mother say that none of her children ever fell down stairs, in spite of the fact that their steps were badly constructed and dangerous. She accounted for this very easily. She said that whenever a child became a year old she cut a lock of his hair, wrapped it in a piece of paper, and put it in one of the cracks of the stairs. The children might come near falling, but never actually did so, for they would always find something to catch hold of.

It is almost a general custom in the Philippines that after a wedding the newly married couple remains at home. It is believed that should they go on a trip by sea a storm would arise, or by land some mishap would overtake them.

When the mountain people lose their way in the woods they have a simple and sure way of finding the right path. They take off their coat, turn it inside out, and when they put it on again in this manner they have no difficulty in reaching the place to which they desire to go.

Even today these superstitions are generally believed by the mountain people, and they consider as foolish the people who ridicules them, for they say they have been proved true by experience.

A CARGO OF FIVE THOUSAND CATS

[London Globe.]

Japan, it seems, is infested with rats, and the reason, it is explained by a Paris contemporary, is that the Japanese cats, which are not prolific, are pampered to an extraordinary degree. During the last few days, the chronicler proceeds, a ship has left one of the principal German ports with 5,000 cats on board. These on arrival are to be settled in the various maritime towns of the Mikado's dominions, and we further learn that the present consignment of cats is to be followed by four others, each of 5,000. The name of the principal German port is not given.

CAPE VERDE NEGROES.

Travel to America and Find Employment in Cape Cod Towns in Massachusetts.

[New York Evening Post.]

Few persons in New York realize that negroes from Africa are coming to Massachusetts in considerable numbers year by year. During the five years to January 1, 1905, about 3,500 colored immigrants entered the port of New Bedford, while the number entering that port during the past six months exceeds 1,000.

These negroes come from the Cape Verde Islands, which lie about 300 miles off the west coast of Africa. They are more or less mixed with the Portuguese and call themselves "Portugee," the name by which the Azorean immigrants, who are scattered about Cape Cod towns, are also known. The fact that both peoples are from Portuguese territory, and call themselves by the same name, gives rise to the popular notion, even in the minds of many among whom they settle, that both are but slight variations of the same radical stock.

There is, however, a wide difference between the immigrants from the Azores and those from the Cape Verde Islands. The former are of pure Latin descent, with perhaps a slight strain of other European blood, due to their being a maritime people. The Cape Verders—or Bravans—as they are sometimes called, from the name of their chief city—are either negroes or negroids, the latter from mixture with the Portuguese settlers, and in particular, the Portuguese garrison in the islands.

Some time ago the people of Norwich protested against the admission of Cape Verders to the public schools. In some of the Cape Cod towns the colored settlers number from 10 to 20 per cent of the population. Wareham, a small Cape town, contains more than 400 Cape Verders, most of whom from a separate colony known as Fogo, from the Cape Verde town of that name. The reason for the present influx of Africans is a drought in the islands and scarcity of food.

Unlike the Azoreans, who came to Boston in the White Star steamships that touch at Punta Delgada the Cape Verders sail across the 2,500 miles of ocean in little schooners of 200 tons' burden, taking from a month to 50 days for the passage. Because of the regulation which requires a ship to carry a physician if 50 or more passengers are aboard, these schooners bring as a rule 49 persons, with such sheep, pigs, goats, and chickens as are necessary for food, and which are kept on deck to roam about at will.

Accommodations on these little caravels are primitive in the extreme. The passengers sleep on mattresses in the hold, and eat food which the cook hands from the galley. One who visits the half-dozen of these craft that are regularly tied up at the New Bedford wharves can well imagine the character of the slave ships of a century ago, and the conditions that attended the "middle passage."

The ships are manned and captained by colored Bravans, who are great navigators, and traders as well. In the fall and winter most of these craft trade between the Cape Verde Islands and the mainland of Africa, carrying cargoes of fruits to the French settlements at Goree and thereabouts. It is a three days' sail from the islands to the continent. There they get their firewood to burn in the galley stove on the voyage back to the islands and thence to America—gnarled, knotty sticks that are piled on deck in the lee of the deckhouse, with an axe and chopping-block near at hand. Provisioning of the schooners is also done on the mainland, and consists, in addition to the animals, principally of coarse rice, which the cook is obliged to pick over, as it is procured with hulls and kernals.

Returning to the Cape Verdes from America, the schooners carry furniture, oars, oil, logwood, flour, dress goods, hominy, blacking, washboards, and even cord wood for use in the islands, their own timber supply having been depleted.

The Cape Verde immigrants either settle in the tenement district of New Bedford, where there are some 1,800 of them, or else go to the Cape, there to find work at the sawmills or on the cranberry bogs. This latter work seems to be almost entirely given over to the Cape Verders, and explains their large numbers in towns like Wareham, Carver, and Harwich. Some of them return to Africa in the fall in the same manner in which they came, but many become permanent residents, often securing a small patch of land and building a shack in which to live. There are cases of highly respected Cape Verders, one of whom, for instance, has a store and does a good business.

A SEASON OF FEASTING.

[Jacob A. Riis, in the Century Magazine.]

When we were not dancing or playing games, we literally ate our way through the two holiday weeks. Pastry by the mile did we eat, and general indigestion brooded over the town when it emerged into the white light of the new year. At any rate, it ought to have done so. It is a prime article of faith with the Danes to this day that for any one to go out of a friend's house, or of anybody's house, in the Christmas season without partaking of its cheer, is to "bear away their Yule," which no one must do on any account. Every house was a bakery from the middle of December until Christmas eve, and oh! the quantities of cake we ate, and such cakes! We were 16 normally in our home, and mother mixed the dough for her cakes in a veritable horse trough kept for that exclusive purpose. As much as a sack of flour went in I guess and gallons of molasses, and whatever else went to the mixing. For weeks there had been long and anxious speculations as to "what father would do," and gloomy conferences between him and mother over the state of the family pocketbook, which was never plethoric; but at last the joyful message ran through the house from attic to kitchen that the appropriation had been made, "even for citron," which meant throwing all care to the winds. The thrill of it, when we children stood by and saw the generous avalanche going into the trough! What would not come of it!

The whole family turned to and helped make the cakes and cut the "pepper nuts," which were little squares of cake dough we played cards for and stuffed our pockets with, crashing them incessantly. Talk about eating between meals, ours was a continuous performance for two solid weeks. The pepper nuts were the real staple of Christmas to us children. We rolled the dough in long strings like slender eels and then cut in a little on the bias. They were good, those nuts, when baked brown. I wish I had some now.

It all stood for the universal desire that in the joyous season everybody be made glad. I know that in the old town no one went hungry or cold during the holidays, if indeed any one ever did. Every one gave of what he had, and no one was afraid of pauperizing anybody by his gifts, for they were given gladly and in love, and that makes all the difference—did then and does now. At Christmas it is perfectly safe to let our scientific principles go and just remember the Lord's command that we love one another. I subscribe to all the scientific principles of giving with perfect loyalty, and try to practice them till Christmas week comes in with its holy and the smell of balsam and fir, and the memories of childhood in the old town, then—well, anyway, it's only a little while. New Year's and the long cold winter comes soon enough.

[illegible] the mob against Nord Alexis was appeased for a short time [illegible] of the news that the [illegible] had embarked on a [illegible] point on the coast [illegible] for the president is [illegible] palace. The news was given [illegible] authorities for the sole pur[illegible] persuading the people to dis[illegible] now realizing however, [illegible] were deceived, and new [illegible] again forming round the [illegible] attitude is distinctly [illegible].

[illegible] of the morning came [illegible] were expected. Uneasiness [illegible] throughout the night on [illegible] the people, but it was not [illegible] that the outbreak would occur [illegible] or would be successful [illegible] the shedding of a drop of [illegible]. The movement was well or[illegible] the preparations were com[illegible] last night, and in the early [illegible] of the morning bands of citi[illegible], organized and armed, quietly [illegible] possession of the various points of vantage. The movement was di[illegible] by General Canal, a member of the senate, and not a shot was fired. The soldiers of Nord Alexis saw that the rebels had the upper hand, and [illegible] quickly let it be seen that they [illegible] intention of starting a fight [illegible] undoubtedly would have re[illegible] much bloodshed. The presence of American cruisers Des Moines and [illegible] and French cruiser Duguay [illegible] undoubtedly had a restraining [illegible].

The citizens occupy all police sta[illegible], the arsenal and the port. All [illegible] bodies of men are well armed and well supplied with ammunition, [illegible] showing the thoroughness with which the move was organized. For[illegible] are grateful to General Canal for the efficient way in which he di[illegible] the coup.

As soon as the success of the move[illegible] was established a number of prominent citizens met and formed a public committee of safety, and the [illegible] of order in Port au Prince is in the hands of this body.

At [illegible] o'clock last night there was an outbreak of rifle firing in the suburbs, and it was thought that the conspiracy had been discovered and the fighting had begun. This was, however, a false alarm. Excitement reigned for a while, [illegible] it was soon learned that the fight[illegible] came from an excited patrol. With this exception the night passed quiet[illegible], and there was nothing to intimate [illegible] authorities that the citizens were preparing to take possession of the city at daybreak.

President Nord Alexis is still in the palace. The members of the diplomatic corps were in conference this morning, [illegible] purpose of taking measures to [illegible] and hasten the departure of the president from the republic. All the [illegible] ministers, together with the [illegible] officials under Nord Alexis, have taken refuge in the vari[illegible] foreign legations. These are the same men who nine months ago were protesting vociferously against the [illegible] of the right of refuge to un[illegible] revolutionists by the foreign [illegible] and consular representa[illegible]. Today they are only too happy to seek the protection of a foreign flag [illegible] escape the fury of the people.

General Lecomte, minister of the in[illegible], General Marcelin, minister of finance and commerce, and M. Lafement, one of the personal advisers of Presi[illegible] Alexis, took refuge in the French legation last night. This left General Leblanc, minister of justice, the only member of the cabinet to stay by the president. Early this morning, however, General Marcelin changed his mind. He declared that it was his desire and in[illegible] to stick by the president to the [illegible] and he returned to the palace.

The only man who remains loyal to President Alexis today is General [illegible] Gabriel, his nephew, who for the last six months has directed the [illegible] of the Alexis administration. [illegible] at the palace with Alexis.

The fact that Nord Alexis's ministers deserted him at the last moment did [illegible] come as a surprise. Their loyalty was suspected and the deflections of the last two or three days showed what might be expected. General Jules Coicou, military commander of Port au Prince, is among the refugees, as is also General Hyacinthe. Coicou is the man who caused the assassinations of his own brother and two of his [illegible] last January for complicity in the unsuccessful revolutionary move[illegible] which broke out at that time, and Hyacinthe is the official who pre[illegible] at the wholesale execution which followed the suppression of this out[illegible]. He has taken refuge at the German legation.

General Marcelin is at present on board the Duguay Trouin. He first [illegible] refuge at the French consulate, [illegible] not believing he was absolutely [illegible] made a pathetic appeal to the French minister, M. Carteron, to [illegible] on board the French cruiser, [illegible] that the man really was in danger. M. Carteron consented. General Marcelin is reported to have acquired a fortune in office.

General Canal is urging the people [illegible] remain calm, explaining that if [illegible] any serious disorder on shore the cruisers in the harbor will disem[illegible] armed forces to protect the prop[illegible] of foreigners.

No change in the position occupied [illegible] rebels has been reported since [illegible] evening. They were then about 30 [illegible] from Port au Prince. General [illegible] leader of the movement, is [illegible] here at any moment.

NO SURPRISE IN WASHINGTON.

Department Will Not Hurry in Recognizing Haytian Government.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.--The news [illegible] establishment of a provisional [illegible] in Hayti created little or [illegible] at the State Department. [illegible] president, it is not likely [illegible] United States will be in a [illegible] to recognize the government of [illegible].

"THE CALL OF THE NORTH."

Robert Edeson Appears at Opera House Before a Large and Appreciative Audience.

"The Call of the North," the dramatization by George Broadhurst of Stewart Edward White's story, "Conjuror's House," was presented at the Opera House Tuesday evening before an audience which completely filled the auditorium--parquet, balcony and gallery and found much pleasure in the play and the acting. Robert Edeson, who has appeared in "Ranson's Folly," "Strongheart," "Classmates" and other plays, has unquestionably found in "The Call of the North" one equal to all these. As Ned Trent he has a part well suited to his robust style of acting and throughout gave a capital impersonation of the character. He has many difficult phases of the part to interpret, and in all of them appealed to the evident satisfaction of his audience. He was warmly welcomed and heartily applauded during the progress of the play receiving several curtain calls.

Mr. Edeson had a uniformly good support. Ane Murdock, who appeared as Virginia Albret, was admirably suited to the part, giving this character a refined, painstaking interpretation which brought out strong features. Maude Knowlton as Mrs. Brockton and Beatrice Prentice as Julie Hagenan were excellent. Spottswoode Aitken and Seymour Stratton as the two Scotchmen, MacDougall and McTavish, gave a clever interpretation of the comedy element and their "escapade" which was broken for the love of Mrs. Brockton, was a bright spot in the story. Stephen Wright made the part of Galen Albret, the factor, one of the strong features--although an unpleasant one--of the play. George Spelvin as Rodman Band, Lawrence Eddinger as Dr. Cockburn, Percival Aylmer as Rev. Archibald Crane, Harrison Ford as Achille Picard and Joseph Rawley as Me-en-gan, the head Indian, were all incongenial roles and each gave his character a life-like impersonation.

The scenic arrangement, especially of the first and second acts, showing the trading station and the woods beyond, and that of the third act, showing the bend of the river, were realistic and added materially to the success of the performance.

DEATH OF MRS. D'OREMIEULX.

Mrs. Laura Wolcott d'Oremieulx, who died yesterday at her home in New York, was born in 1825 at Sunswick Long Island, and was the daughter of George Gibbs of this city and Laura Wolcott, daughter of Oliver Wolcott, Secretary of the Treasury. Mr. d'Oremieulx became a naturalized American citizen and for 15 years was an officer of the United States army and instructor of French at West Point. AWAITING THE RESULTS.

Long Delays Before Returns Come from All the Wards.

Peculiar Inquiries on the Busy Telephone Wires—Large Vote Cast.

The city election proceeded Tuesday afternoon with considerable more activity than marked the morning hours. As the time shortened the workers at the polls began to hustle to find voters who had not gone to the polls, and the result was a large vote in the afternoon. It was not quite as large as that of the Presidential election last November, but it was not expected to be. Some men vote only for President and some who were here to vote then were absent yesterday, so that it was not possible to bring out nearly as large a vote.

It lacked, however, but 384 of being as large as in November, and that means that there was a great deal of hustling done to bring the voters to the polls in the afternoon. But they voted, and generally they voted so that their votes counted for mayor, for the total of the mayor's vote was only 78 less than the total vote cast, and in the Fifth ward the total vote for mayor was only one less than the total cast. The total vote in each ward and the number of names on the lists not voted are as follows:

Voting,	476	1049	803	670	768	4058
Not,	211	221	203	226	198	1059

Compared with the total vote of last November, there was a falling off of 384, while compared with the vote of the city election of 1907 there was a larger vote by 951.

The votes were cast, the workers had done their best on all sides, and all that remained was to count the votes and announce the results. This the wardens and clerks proceeded to do with varying satisfaction to the public. The first ward to send in any returns was the Third, which had the mayoralty vote in at 7:30. This was promising, for it gave hopes of an early decision, which subsequent events did not justify. It also gave hopes to both the Boyle and the Clarke supporters, for each seemed satisfied with the figures.

Then there was a long wait, though it was not long for the operator at the telephone; he was busy. Finally at 9:02 came the mayor School Committee and aldermanic counts from the First ward. These outlined something, giving a good line on the aldermanic ticket with the exception of the Fifth ward. On the mayoralty both the Boyle and Clarke supporters still stood pat.

At 10:20 the figures for the mayor, School Committee and alderman arrived from the Fifth. This was the blow which settled the Clarke hopes. When that overwhelming vote for Boyle came in it was evident that the final result was in sight.

When the vote for mayor and aldermen came in from the Second, at 10:50, this was made certain, for Mr. Boyle then had a plurality of 122, according to the figures at the News office.

Then there was another long wait for the Fourth ward, where they counted the entire ballot and finally had it all counted, so that the full returns were in at 12:20. Before the full returns had arrived advance information had been received of the mayoralty vote in that ward, and when the figures finally were received these were found to be correct and Mr. Boyle's plurality went up to 264. These figures were modified slightly when the wardens' lists were looked over at the City Hall.

The Fifth ward was the first to put in a complete count, which reached the News office at 11:20. The First ward was next, at 11:45, and the Fourth third, at 12:20. The Third and Second wards were never counted so far as the News bulletin was concerned. The figures for all but the Representative Council were on the board, the crowd which had stood patiently waiting for hours had drifted away home, and there seemed no good reason for remaining up all night to bulletin the Council ticket for the last watch of the police. So business closed shortly before 2 o'clock, with some late ones, who might as well have been in bed, still telephoning.

The Third ward was bothered in its count by the absence of the warden and the fact that some inexperienced supervisors were there, who could do little to help in the count. The Second ward had the most votes to count, which made it late.

The times of the arrival of the returns at the City Hall were: First ward, 11:45; fifth, 12:10 (it might have been in first had the carriage arrived earlier); Fourth, 12:30; Second, 2:02; Third, 2:15.

The News telephones were fully as busy last night as on any previous election night. Perhaps they were more busy and surely as strange questions came over the lines as ever.

The first telephone call for election news came at 6:42 p. m., just 12 minutes after the polls closed, and almost before the ward officials had taken off their coats, rolled up their sleeves, lighted their pipes and were actually prepared to dump the ballots out of the boxes.

The question asked happened to be one which could be answered at that early part of the night, for the female voice at the other end said: "Can you tell me who is mayor? The reply was prompt. "Yes, William P. Clarke." She was satisfied and hung up, while of course she did not ask for the information she really desired.

From this time until toward sunrise the little bell tingled almost incessantly and the questions were legion. It is said toward sunrise, but so far as the News staff is aware, from personal attention to calls, there was nothing doing after 2 o'clock. At that hour, Thames street being deserted by all but the police, and there being no telling when the ward officials would complete their counts, it was believed advisable to close up and snatch [illegible]

DUE TO NATURAL CAUSES.

Death of Thomas C. Sherman of Fall River Not from Suicide, as Reported

When Mr. William J. Goddard, brother-in-law of the late Thomas C. Sherman, went to Fall River yesterday, on receiving the news of the death of Mr. Sherman, he found that the alarming rumors about suicide which had come to Newport, and had spread like wildfire 5 I over town, had no foundation in fact. Mr. Sherman had died and the conditions under which the body were found gave rise to a suspicion in the minds of those who heard it first that he had committed suicide, but a careful examination of the body by Medical Examiner Gunning showed that death had resulted from natural causes.

Mr. Sherman left his home Monday morning, about 5 o'clock, for the office, and was not thereafter seen by his family until his dead body was found in a toilet room in the basement, which was seldom used by the family, Tuesday morning. When he was missed Monday it was supposed that he had come to Newport, as he frequently did, to see his mother, but when he did not return his family became greatly alarmed, for it was not his habit to be missing from home.

Finally a neighbor stated that she remembered seeing him enter his yard about 10 o'clock Monday morning and he seemed not to be feeling well. An investigation was made in the basement, the entrance to which is from the yard, and the toilet room door was found blocked. A policeman was called and forced the door against which the body of Mr. Sherman had fallen. He was dead and there was considerable blood about the face. Medical Examiner Gunning was called and found that Mr. Sherman had evidently fallen forward against the door in a fainting fit, or as the result of a slight shock. In falling he had struck his forehead, cutting it slightly, and had fallen on his nose, which bled profusely. It was this bleeding which, in the opinion of the medical examiner, caused Mr. Sherman's death, by suffocation, as his face was in the pool of blood which flowed from the nose.

It was a sad ending for a man who during his busy life had furnished so much fun and enjoyment to all with whom he came in contact. All his friends, however, are glad to hear that, however sad the death, it was due to natural causes. No one could conceive how such a good-natured, jolly man as "Tom" could take his life, and all are glad that such was not the case.

Order for Changes in Uniform of State National Guard.

Major Patstone of United Train of Artillery Retired—Hold-Up in East Greenwich.

Immediate steps to make the changes in the uniforms of the Rhode Island National Guard, necessitated by the transfer of the infantry regiments to the coast artillery, are ordered in a general order issued by Ralph C. Watrous, acting governor and commander-in-chief, from the adjutant general's office. The order directs that officers who have been transferred to the coast artillery make as soon as possible, the changes in their uniforms, made necessary by the transfer. Commanding officers of the different companies of coast artillery are ordered to make requisition upon the quartermaster general for the proper equipment per uniform for the enlisted men of their commands. The order directs that company commanders shall ascertain each year how many men's enlistment will expire during the six months next preceding the annual camp, and that each commander shall enlist before January 1 of each year as many reserve men as will be sufficient to fill the vacancies as they occur and bring each company enrollment up to a minimum of 59 at camp time. The order provides that the hospital corps until further orders shall consist of a field hospital, to consist of three sergeants of the first class, seven sergeants, 18 privates of the first class, and six privates. Two sergeants of the first class shall be assigned to the coast artillery corps. One sergeant shall be assigned to each squadron of cavalry. The order provides also that the signal corps shall for the present consist of one captain, one first lieutenant, two sergeants of the first class, three sergeants, five corporals, one cook, nine privates of the first class, nine privates.

Major Lewis Patstone of the United Train of Artillery is placed on the retired list of commissioned officers, under General Orders No. 17, issued from the office of Adjutant General Frederic M. Sackett. He will hereafter be entitled to wear the uniform of the highest rank held by him on state occasions. The order, which is signed by Ralph C. Watrous, acting governor and commander-in-chief, gives his military record as follows: State Militia—Oct. [illegible], 1892, joined the United Train of Artillery; April 28, 1893, commissioned first lieutenant; April 25, 1894, commissioned captain, and served as such until 1898. Term of service in state militia, five years and six months; time of service as a commissioned officer in the state militia, [illegible] years and two days. December 3, 1905, commissioned major, United Train of Artillery, and served as such until Nov. 16, 1908. United States Service—May 3, 1898, commissioned captain First Rhode Island United States Volunteer Infantry, and served as such to March 29, 1899; August 18, 1899, commissioned captain, Forty-sixth United States regular volunteer infantry, and served as such to June [illegible], 1901.

Held up at the point of a revolver by a masked man, E. A. Wood, conductor on the East Greenwich line, was forced to give up all the money he had in his possession, some $70, about 12:30 o'clock this morning, in East Greenwich. The hold-up and robbery took place at the end of the line at the yard of the Bleachery, East Greenwich. There were no passengers on the car, the only occupants being the conductor and his motorman, William E. Gould. The latter was not armed, but even if he had been would probably have been unable to do anything toward preventing the robbery or capturing the robber, for the latter had both Wood and Gould covered with his revolver while the conductor was giving up his cash. The car had made its last trip for the night to East Greenwich, and the crew were preparing to return to Providence, as the car is put up at the Elmwood car house. The conductor, Wood, looking out of the vestibule door as the car came to a stop in the yard, saw a man lying on the ground close to the track. He turned into the car and started toward the forward end. Suddenly a voice behind him ordered him to turn around. Wheeling about, the conductor found himself looking into the barrel of a revolver in the hands of a masked man, the same man, he believes, whom he saw lying on the ground when he looked out of his car. "Throw up your hands!" came the command from the stranger, this being followed by the order to "Hand over your money." The conductor, with the revolver held close to his face, lost no time in complying with the commands of the highwayman. Keeping one hand over his head, he handed out his money with the other from the pockets on one side of his clothing, then reversed the process until he had handed over all the money he had with him, a little over $70. The motorman was a witness to the robbery, but, unarmed as he was, and also covered by the gun, he did not move from his position in the front vestibule. The robber, after stuffing the money into his pockets, backed out of the car, still covering the car men with his pistol, leaped from the car and disappeared in the darkness. The crew of the car, after recovering somewhat from their scare, lost no time in running the car from the terminus and speeding it on its way to Providence. The scene of the hold-up is a dark spot where the cars meet those from Narragansett Pier. After dark it is practically deserted. The conductor could give but a meagre description of the robber.

For the death of Oliver LaBelle, late of New Bedford, a verdict was rendered against the Rhode Island Company yesterday afternoon, with damages fixed at $[illegible] in the suit brought by the widow, Emma G. LaBelle, administratrix. [illegible] ... the Apponaug road toward Providence. A flagman was stationed at the crossing, but the smash occurred by reason of the fact that two cars were passing in opposite directions, one of which the chauffeur probably failed to see in time to prevent the accident.

Governor and Mrs. Higgins returned from their honeymoon last evening, arriving in Providence from New York. They went directly to Pawtucket and later to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Maguire. During the honeymoon the governor and his bride visited Louisville, Cincinnati, Pittsburg and other cities in the middle west. A short stop was made in order to see the Mammoth Cave in Kentucky. Monday the couple were entertained by Judge Harmon, governor-elect of Ohio, at his Cincinnati home. Both Governor and Mrs Higgins enjoyed the trip and were in the best of health all the time. They were, however, glad to arrive back home.

"We are satisfied that the present prevalence of typhoid fever in this city can be traced to the Coolum milk, and that the most probable source of contagion is found in that portion of the Coolum milk furnished from the George B. Clarke farm in West Kingston," says Dr. Gardner T. Swarts of the State Board of Health. Dr. Swarts made this statement after a careful investigation which he and Walter O. Scott, inspector of milk made in West Kingston yesterday. This investigation showed that at least three persons who at one time or another had worked on the Clarke farm had suffered with typhoid this fall, and that there had been several other cases in the immediate neighborhood.

Chester W. Barrows has been reappointed referee in bankruptcy for the fifth term of two years. The appointment, made by Judge Arthur L. Brown, in the United States district court, was the first court order entered in the new federal court house. Mr. Barrows's first appointment was made in 1900. He was graduated from Brown in 1895 and from Harvard Law School in 1898, and was admitted to the bar in the latter year. He was an instructor in law at Brown University from 1899 to 1903, and has been a member of the State Board of Bar Examiners since 1903. Nathan W. Littlefield also holds a referee's appointment, having first been appointed on the passage of the national bankruptcy act in 1898.

Clarence B. Lester, for the past two years legislative reference librarian at the Indiana State Library, has been appointed, after a competitive examination, to the same position in the New York State Library at Albany. Mr. Lester is a Providence man and a graduate of Brown University in the class of 1900, where he received the degree of A. B. He studied in the departments of political science and economics at the Wisconsin University for three years, before his connection with the Indiana State Library in 1906.

A stand-pat policy on the cotton schedules of the proposed new tariff law was strongly urged yesterday before the ways and means committee in Washington by Henry F. Lippitt of Providence, general manager of the Manville Company. Mr. Lippitt, who was one of the chief spokesmen of a big delegation of manufacturers and labor leaders representing the cotton industry of all New England, pointed out that there is free competition in the cotton trade. He said that cotton importations were now $70,000,000 a year, which is a big increase since the Dingley law was enacted.

Judge Frederick Rueckert was re-elected president of the Providence school committee at the meeting for organization last evening, on a single ballot cast by Secretary Rose, the vote instructing the secretary to cast such a ballot being as hearty as it was unanimous.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL UNIVERSITY

Committee Organized in New York to Forward the Movement for Its Endowment.

A committee has been organized in New York to forward the movement for the endowment of the Lincoln Memorial University as a national monument to the memory of Abraham Lincoln. General Oliver Otis Howard, to whom in their last interview President Lincoln expressed his desire that something be done for the benefit of the mountaineers of the border land between Tennessee, Virginia and Kentucky, among whom Lincoln was born, and whom he loved, was active in the forwarding of the movement which resulted in the chartering, February 12, 1897, of the Lincoln Memorial University, near Cumberland Gap, in Claiborne county, Tenn., and, with other friends of the institution, has labored these 11 years in its aid.

The committee organized, of which he is a member, intends to take advantage of the Lincoln centenary, February 12, 1909, to raise $500,000, to be known as the "Lincoln centennial endowment fund," for the benefit of the university which has now 600 acres of land, buildings worth $150,000 and an endowment of $100,000. A letter from President Roosevelt to General Howard was read, in which the President said:

"Just a word once again to wish you all good fortune in what you are doing for Lincoln Memorial University. I hope that the hundredth anniversary of Mr. Lincoln's birth will see you with the full endowment for the university which you so need and which in the interest of the people at large it is so desirable that you should have. There could be no finer memorial to Lincoln than this university, placed just where you have built it."

BOYLE BEATS CLARKE.

Elected Mayor by Plurality of 266 Bliss Running Third.

Winners in Aldermanic Contest Albro, Shepley, Mahoney, Cottrell and Kelly.

The municipal election Tuesday resulted in the defeat of Mayor Clarke and ex-Alderman Bliss and the election of ex-Mayor and ex-Alderman Patrick J. Boyle by a plurality of 266 over his nearest competitor.

It also resulted in the re-election of three of the present members of the School Committee—Dr. Rufus E. Darrah, Rev. Emery H. Porter and Mrs. Mary S. W. Marsh, whose terms expire next January, and the election of Miss Anna P. Hunter in place of Mrs. [illegible] Brown, who was not a candidate for re-election.

For the Board of Aldermen Aldermen Shepley and Cottrell are re-elected. Thomas C. Albro, Jr., succeeds Alderman Kingman. Jeremiah P. Mahoney succeeds to the place now held by Mayor-elect Boyle and ex-Alderman Michael F. Kelly is returned to the board, defeating Alderman Anthony by the closest vote of the day.

For the Representative Council a majority of the present members are re-elected and a few new members are chosen for the term of three years. In the First ward nine members are returned and there are four new ones. In the Second 10 of the present members are re-elected, including Robert S. Burlingame who had before been a member, and three are new men. In the Third six are old and seven new members. In the Fourth five of the present delegation are returned, and [illegible] are new members, including Andrew K. Quinn, who was a member last year but was not a candidate for this year. In the Fifth four of the present members are returned, Daniel J. Beasley is returned after a year's absence and eight are new men this year.

The total vote was much larger than was cast in the municipal election last year and compares favorably with that in the Presidential election in November, when the vote was the largest ever cast in the city. The gain over last year was general throughout the city, each ward showing a material increase. There is little to be shown by comparison of details in the vote of the two municipal elections, as the conditions differed materially. In the present contest, although there are supposed to be no partisan politics under the new charter, there was unquestionably a large amount of partisan politics, and the Democrats won a decisive victory, the new mayor and aldermen being almost unanimously of that political belief. The Republicans also supported partisan candidates in a measure, but their votes were divided between two or more men and this left the opportunity for the Democrats to secure the election of candidates of that party.

The election of members of the Representative Council was largely of a non-partisan character, although the wards generally elected a majority of candidates according to the political supremacy in the several localities. The new Council will be largely made of present members, and none of those who have been active in the proceedings of the body have been defeated for re-election. In addition two of the members in the first year under the new charter have been again elected, while a number of former members of the city government, including ex-Mayor Daniel D. Fearing and ex-Councilman Patrick J. Morgan, have been chosen, and their former experience should be of service to the city.

Of the new Board of Aldermen two are present members and one, Alderman-elect Kelly, was an alderman under the old charter.

The vote in detail, as received by the city clerk, slightly varying from the first figures received from the wards, was follows:

A Graceful Model.

The separate waist is doomed, yet separate blouse effect—when—in the—may be attractive. None of the silky of tucked chiffon and fine needlework, so blended that the effect is of a frock, ful, one edge of the draped fabric being allowed to overlap the other at the outer arm seam, the fabric falling in a most graceful cascade down the arm. Over a transparent yoke of the tucked chiffon a dainty little chemisette of fine hand needlework fastens with very small black velvet buttons. Oddly-shaped motifs of gold embroidery give a French touch to this blouse, and the lavish use of buttons on the skirt carried out the effect of long sweeping lines. there is shown a frock in which the same color as the skirt worn with it chiffon broadcloth appears in blouse yet the lines of bodice and skirt are all in one. The frilled sleeve is grace-

PORTSMOUTH.

Town Council Considers Liquor Business—Mr. Sherman's Death Unexpected.

(Regular Correspondence of the News.)

At an adjourned meeting of the town council, all the members present, Richard Backworth presented the names of William L. Sisson and Frank W. Greene as sureties on his liquor bond and they were accepted. William Shaw & Son presented the Title Guaranty Surety Company of Scranton, Pa., as surety on his liquor bond and it was accepted.

It was voted that an ordinance relating to opening and closing saloons, allowing them to remain open until 11 o'clock Saturdays, and on other days from 5 a. m. until 12 p. m., be adopted. It was also voted that the clerk instruct the prosecuting officer to close all places where liquor is sold contrary to law.

Voted, That the bill of Henry Anthony, moderator, November 5, 1907, $5; November 3, 1908, $5, and November 5, 1908, recounting ballots, $2, total $12, be paid.

Mr. George S. Sherman's death Tuesday morning, from paralysis of the heart, as the result of the automobile accident in Newport, Saturday, was quite unexpected. As late as 7:30, the attending physician thought he was doing well, but soon after he grew rapidly worse and although his physician was with him the last two hours of his life he could not change the result.

Mr. Sherman was a very active man, engaged in various kinds of business, his trade being that of a mason, and for such work he often took considerable contracts. He was a descendant of the Revolutionary Shermans of Portsmouth. His grandfather was Benjamin C. Sherman who married Waite Hall, daughter of Parker Hall, the Halls being a well known and prominent family. Of their large family, his father, David D., was one of the oldest children, his mother being Cynthia Dixy of Tiverton. Mr. David Sherman died 41 years ago, leaving three children—Charles now living in California; William in Providence and the deceased in Portsmouth. Besides a widow, who was Miss Emma Sisson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sisson, he leaves a son, Walter, who suffered greatly from rheumatism during last winter and spring, when he was confined to bed for months, and Miss Amy, a senior at the Moses Brown School, Providence.

Mr. Gardiner T. Sherman, Mrs. Benjamin B. White, Miss Etta M. Sherman and Miss E. Fannie Sherman attended the funeral Tuesday in Swansea of a cousin, Miss Ida Miller Reeves, who died quite suddenly.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union met Tuesday with the president, Mrs. Eunice Greene. There was a good attendance. The larger part of the time was spent in discussing plans for the sale and supper which was to have been given this week, but has been postponed on account of the death of Mr. George S. Sherman, his wife being an active member.

Mrs. William R. Hunter entertained her sewing class Tuesday afternoon. Refreshments were served.

Mrs. William H. Gifford, who has been very ill for some weeks at the home of her nephew, Mr. John C. Manchester, near Quaker Hill, sustained a shock Tuesday.

The auction of farm stock of John Francis, yesterday at the George B. Anthony farm, which he improved during the past year, was well attended and the goods brought good prices.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin B. White entertained a large family party Thanksgiving day.

Mrs. Kate Bailey has returned from Dartmouth, Mass., after spending three weeks with her son and family.

There were eight tables at the whist club at Oakland Hall. The first woman's prize was won by Mrs. W. G. Albro, a box of writing paper; the first prize for men by Mr. [illegible] Chase, Jr., a pocket book. The consolation prizes by Dorothea [illegible] and William G. [illegible], a [illegible] dish and a [illegible].

THE HEAVENS IN DECEMBER.

Winter Begins When Sun Enters Sign of Capricornus.

Eclipse of Sun for Those in Southern Hemisphere—Brightest Comet Still Visible.

[Professor Eric Doolittle of the University of Pennsylvania.]

The 22d. of this month, at 1 A. M., the sun in his eastward journey among the stars will enter the sign of Capricornus, and at this instant, astronomically, winter will begin. To all who are in the northern hemisphere this will be the shortest day of the year; on this day the sun will begin to climb upward among the stars, at first very slowly, but afterward continually faster, until he will finally reach the celestial equator at V, Fig 1, in March, and winter will be over.

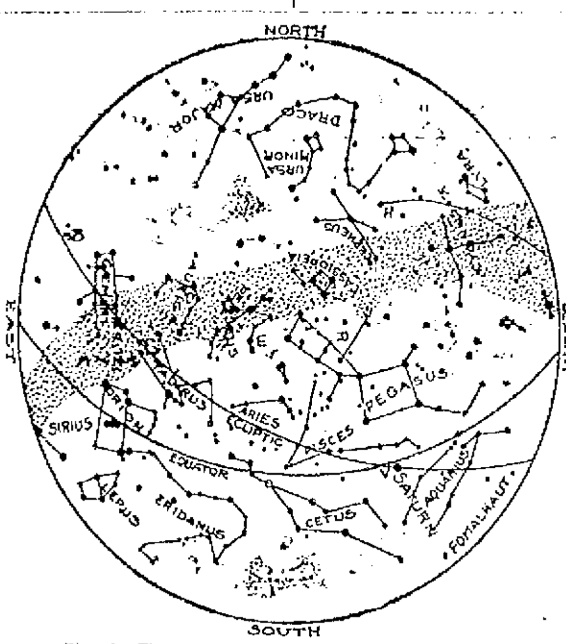

Fig. 1. The constellations at 9 p. m., December 1st.

The sky is already brilliant with the beautiful winter constellations, and the long nights bring unusually favorable opportunities for astronomical observation. The magnificent groups of Orion, the Twins, and the Bull are high up in the east, while Sirius, the Dog Star, which is the most brilliant star of the entire heavens, shines out with its beautiful display of scintillating colors in the southeast. In comparison with this the Royal Star, Fomalhaut, which for so many months has been our brightest south star, looks insignificant. Indeed; just as Sirius enters our sky this summer star sinks from view, to be seen no more.

Almost in the zenith is the bright group Andromeda, with its wonderful nebula at 1, Fig 1; the group Perseus with its striking variable star at E, and the Charioteer, with the bright white star, at C. The early Arabians called this last beautiful star the Driver, because it appeared in the north in the evening sky before the other stars became visible, and so apparently guided and watched over them. It was also known as the Singer, who rides before the camels and cheers them on, the camels being represented by the stars of the Pleiades. This distant star and our own sun are almost identically of the same constitution. But Capella emits 150 times as much light as our sun. It is so far away that its light requires more than 30 years to come to us.

In the northwest, the brilliant, sparkling star Vega has sunk almost to the horizon, and beside the beautiful Northern Cross is apparently standing upright in position on the ground. In the southwest the Great Square of Pegasus is the most striking figure, and below it the two stars, with the planet Saturn, which is, because of its rings, in an excellent position for observation. The rings slowly widening during the month; and we shall see them so nearly edgewise that they will appear as a single line. A small telescope. This is the only planet visible in the early evening toward midnight, however, the planet Jupiter will be seen well up from the ground in the east, almost in line with the path of stars at A and the remarkable Beehive cluster at B. Jupiter rises two hours after the cluster. Possessors of small telescopes may observe interesting eclipses of the moons, December 10, 5 hours, 14 minutes, A. M. December 17, 5 hours 32 minutes, A. M.; December 19, 5 hours 5 minutes, A. M.; and December 26, 1 hours 35 minutes, A. M. On the morning of December 13, but one of the moons is visible, the other three all being hidden behind the planet. At 1 hour 13 minutes A. M., the inner, swiftly-moving moon will appear at the edge of the disc; at 2 hours, 27 minutes, A. M., the second moon will more slowly emerge, and at 5 hours, 16 minutes the outer moon will appear, and all of the satellites again be visible.

On the morning of December 23 a most interesting total eclipse of the sun will occur, visible only to observers in the southern hemisphere. Such eclipses are caused by the observer being carried inside the conical shadow, MV, Fig. 2 of the moon, and so having the entire disc of the sun hidden from him by our satellite. If, however, the observer is at O just beyond the apex of the shadow, the disc of the moon will appear smaller than that of the sun, and will not completely cover it. A brilliant ring of the sun's disc will then be seen surrounding the black disc of the moon, and the eclipse is called an annular or ring eclipse. The eclipse of December 23 begins as an annular eclipse, next changes to total, and finally becomes annular again. The moon's shadow first falls on the swiftly turning earth at A, Fig. 3 at 5 hours 22 minutes, A. M.; it sweeps rapidly along the path from A to D, the shadow leaving the earth at D and the eclipse ending at 8 hours 18 minutes A. M. It is only that part of the path on the round earth between B and C which is sufficiently near the moon to be brought within the shadow. To observers along the portions AB and CD the moon will appear too small to completely hide the sun; to those at the points B and C the moon and sun will appear to be of exactly the same size, so that for an instant the eclipse will be total, while to observers between these points the sun will be completely hidden for a short time, but at no point will the total eclipse last for more than about 11 seconds.

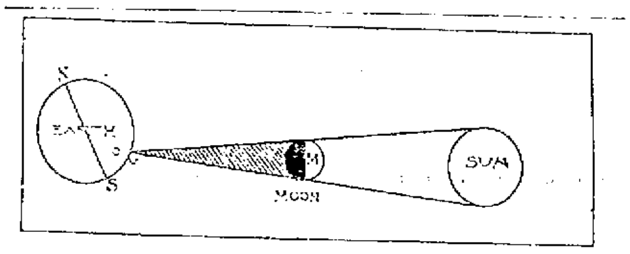

Fig. 2. The solar eclipse of December 23rd.

What is known as a Lunar Appulse occurs on the afternoon of December, 7. On this date an observer on the moon would see the earth pass over the face of the sun, but it would not completely hide the sun from view. Observers in Europe, Asia and Africa will see the brightness of our satellite perceptibly lessened at this time, but the whole phenomenon will be over before the moon rises to observers in the United States.

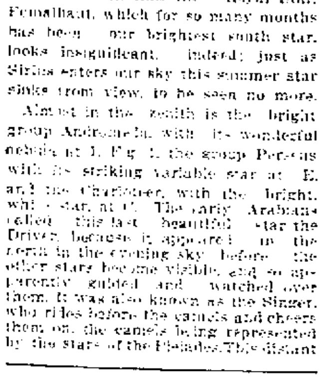

Fig. 3. Path of the moon's shadow on December 23rd.

The little comet due to reappear this year above the constellation of the Twins was rediscovered in its appointed place, and is now under observation, but it is too faint to seen in a small telescope.

The brightest comet of the year is still visible in the early evening, though it is now moving rapidly toward the southern hemisphere. October 5 it was at H, Fig 1; October 20 at K, and November 21 it crossed the equator at the point G, Fig 1. During the first two weeks of December it enters Sagittarius; the possessor of a small telescope may be able to find it with the help of Fig. 1. It is now rapidly approaching the sun and receding from the earth, and therefore growing fainter. It is remarkable that this comet seems to vary irregularly in brightness, becoming suddenly brighter, and then fading away again.

The brilliant, naked eye comet which appears in the sky at intervals of every 76 years is known to be now in the position M, Fig. 1, and during December it will move over the path MU. Though this comet is rushing toward us at the rate of more than two millions of miles a day, it is still beyond the orbit of Jupiter, and up to the present ...

NEW YORK LETTER.

Police Take Census of Central Park Squirrels.

New Skyscrapers—Japanese Studies Hotels—World's Largest Mirror—Spread of Bibles.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The most difficult census ever undertaken is now being carried on in Central Park—a counting of the squirrels which live there. Compared to it the intricacies of the counting of the last mayoralty vote in this city pale into insignificance. However, the undertaking is made necessary to determine whether the Central Park squirrels are becoming extinct. At one time these little animals, always a source of amusement to visitors, became so numerous that it became necessary to thin them out with a shot gun. Of late, however, their numbers have been decreasing. The automobile is held accountable for at least four deaths a day since squirrels are being constantly run over. It is also stated that race suicide is becoming as common among these animals as it is among the fashionable residents around Central Park, chiefly because of the fact that the squirrels are so plentifully supplied with candy and peanuts that they lay up nothing for the winter.

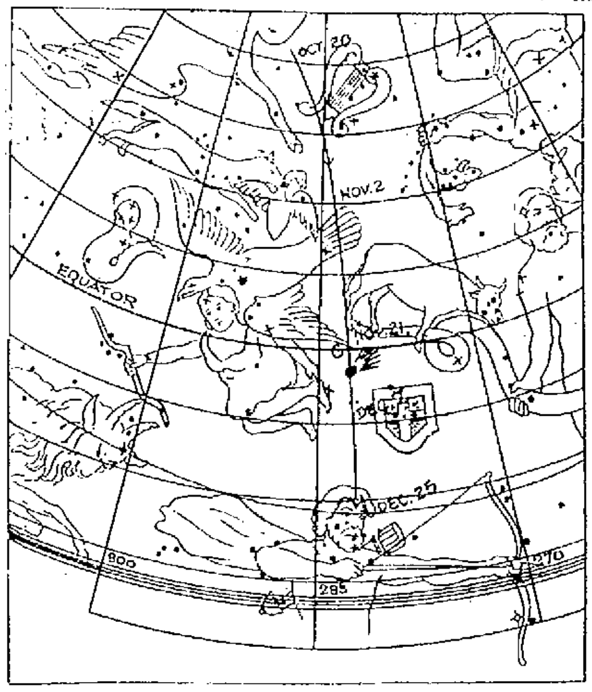

Fig. 6. Path of the new comet.

Whatever the cause, however, a dozen policemen have been given the job of taking the squirrel census, compared to which putting salt on sparrows' tails is a simple feat. Each policeman is furnished with a pocketful of nuts and another pocketful of colored strings. With the former he is to entice the squirrel so that he can tie one of the latter about his tail to avoid double counting. The men detailed for this peculiar employment have had to put up with a great many gibes from their fellow-cops especially since it was learned as a result of their labors that the squirrel population was somewhere between 761 and 11,285, the two extreme figures turned in. Meanwhile juvenile New York is enjoying itself by watching policemen trying to tie pieces of string to squirrels' tails.

This city is apparently building mad, and as a result it has just set a new record not only for this city but for any territory of equal size or population in the world, so far as building construction is concerned. For the nine months just ended no less than 9,722 new building projects have been recorded having an estimated value of $107,054,677. In addition to this there are under consideration plans not yet recorded involving the expenditure of $200,000,000 more, so that altogether more than $300,000,000 is to be spent in the erection of new structures in the city. Expressed in other terms this means that for every man, woman and child in the greater city an average of $75 is to be spent for the erection of edifices in which they work or live. The list which goes to make up this enormous total represents undertakings of almost every sort.

In point of size the buildings projected for the Equitance Life and the new Grand Central Station head the list. Each of these structures will cost $10,000,000. The new municipal building which is to cost $7,000,000 is a close third, and then come the new office building which will occupy the site of the old Fifth Avenue Hotel, costing $4,000,000, the $4,000,000 Pennsylvania railroad terminal, the new postoffice to cost $3,500,000, the $2,000,000 New Theatre, and the new Borough Hall in Queen's county to cost $1,000,000. These of course are only a few in the long list. Indeed there are under way or contemplated 60 single building projects each of which will require $1,000,000 or more. A curious feature of this great activity is found in the fact that from Harlem to the Battery less than 100 permits have been taken out for the erection of residences. The apartment house in all its various forms is rapidly rendering the single dwelling a thing of the past in Manhattan.

In his search for new ideas to at will contribute to the importance and incidentally to the Americanization of the Far East, the Oriental is finding New York more and more useful as a laboratory and is flocking here in increasing numbers instead of to London as formerly. The most curious instance of this desire to master American methods has just come to light through the discovery of the fact that a Japanese named Rinzoh Uchida has been sent to this city to take a thorough course in the American system of running hotels. Mr. Uchida has been living at the Hotel Astor, where he has been gaining experience in all branches from bell-hopping and kitchen management to doing the hand art as clerk. It is even rumored that he has mastered the art of mixing a cocktail, so that travelers from this country to Japan in the near future will not only find an American hotel but also a real cocktail, both of which are now sadly lacking in the Far East. Another rather surprising illustration of the manner in which even China is adopting the methods of this country is furnished recently in the announcement of "extras" by both the Chinese papers printed in this city in connection with the death of the Chinese Empress. The "extras" containing the news did not, however, appear until eight days after her demise.

The biggest mirror in the world has just arrived in New York in the course of its 7,000 mile journey from France, where it was made, to the Pacific coast where it will be used. It will not, however, serve as a medium in which lovely woman may observe the manner in which her dress hangs or assure herself that her hat is placed at the proper angle. Instead it will be used in the study of the stars, for this enormous piece of glass is what is known as a stellar mirror, which, when used in connection with a telescope, reflects the enlarged images of the heavenly bodies. The mirror, which is the largest ever made, is 100 inches or more than eight feet in diameter, its size being thus designated because of its spherical shape. Its weight is nearly 15,000 pounds and the cost of its making was more than $60,000. Over three years were required for its manufacture and even now it is not finished, since the polishing will be done at the observatory where it is to be used. After the completion of the work in France much difficulty was experienced in finding a transportation company willing to take the risk of carrying this gigantic sheet of glass across the Atlantic. As finally brought over it was surrounded by cotton wool and placed in a ... cushions. From New York it will go to New Orleans by water and from there to California by rail.

In spite of the general idea that New York is a wicked city full of snares and pitfalls for the unwary, the Bible continues to be widely read here. According to the report of the Bible Society the last 12 months have seen the distribution of 57,591 Bibles at Pacts in this city and at Ellis Island, the landing place of immigrants. Among these latter 512 Bibles, ... New Testaments and 31,816 copies of the Gospels were distributed in the course of visits to 1,221 vessels. The detailed survey of the total distribution reveals the fact that New York is not quite so much of a foreign city as has been thought, since the number printed in English far exceeded the number printed in any other language, indeed nearly half the total number of books and pamphlets distributed, or 42,175 copies in all, were printed in English. Next came those printed in German numbering 5,907, or less than one-eighth of the English prints. Other nationalities received Bibles and parts printed in their own language in the following order: Polish 5,955, German 7,841, Danish 1,201, Swedish 2,055, Yiddish 3,047, Russians 1,278, Bohemian 2,067, and Hungarians 1,564. These figures give a fair indication of the proportions of various foreign races in New York.

COUNTING THE VOTES.

No Material Change in First Ward, Except for Last Places on Representative Council.

The Board of Aldermen met this morning, soon after 10 o'clock, to begin the task of counting the votes cast at the election yesterday. Mayor Clarke and all the members were present, and they pulled off as follows: Mayor Clarke and Mr. Klugman, Mr. Shepley and Mr. Boyle, Mr. Cottrell and Mr. Anthony.

The First Ward ballots were taken up first and the count of the left-hand side—for Mayor, School Committee and members of the Board of Aldermen—was completed by noon and tabulated. The changes made were all of a minor character though one looked big. Mrs. Marsh's vote in this ward was given out as 348, but when the clerk came to put it down he made it 384, reversing two figures. When her vote was counted it was found to be 352, four more than the warden reported but 32 less than the figures with which she had been credited on the face of the returns. The changes were as follows:

For mayor—Bliss lost 1, Boyle gained 5, Clarke lost 4.

School Committee—Darrah gained 2, Miss Hunter gained 1, Mrs. Marsh lost 32, as above described; Potter gained 1, Sullivan gained 6.

Alderman 1—Albro lost 1, Klugman remained the same, Rogers lost 2. Alderman 2—Callahan gained 1, Dyer lost 1, Kault gained 2, Shepley lost 2. Alderman 3—Hafro lost 1, Mahoney gained 1, Milne lost 1. Alderman 4—Cottrell lost 1, Hale lost 1, Maher lost 1. Alderman 5—Anthony lost 1, Cowles lost 1, Kelly gained 2.

The board at once began the count of the Representative Council ticket in the First ward, which was finished at 2.15. An apparent discrepancy of 100 votes in favor of Thomas Lucas developed, but it was found to be only a clerical error in entering the number of the blank, the record book agreeing with the official count, with only two difference. There were a number of minor changes and some changes in positions, as was to be expected where candidates were so closely bunched, but the only change which really affected things was the counting of six more votes for Bartholomew Fogarty, who was No. 15 on the warden's count. This made Mr. Fogarty tie with Thomas Lucas for twelfth place and disposed of the tie for thirteenth place between Mr. Battle and Mr. Harvey which appeared in the warden's count.

The changes were: Barker gained 1, Battone lost 5, Beattie gained 2, Brightman gained 4, Brown lost 2, Carr gained 4, Clark lost 4, Collins lost 1, Fogarty gained 6, Graham lost 2, Harvey lost 2, Houlihan lost 4, Jestings lost 2, N. King gained 1, W. King lost 8, F. E. Lawton gained 11, W. Lawton gained 3, Lucas gained 2, McGowan lost 1, Preece lost 2, Richter gained 5, Riley remained the same, Schaefer gained 2, Schwarz gained 2, Scoville gained 2, Spencer lost 12, Williams gained 7, Wilson remained the same, Ehrhardt lost 4, Matthews gained 7.

The board will meet at 1 o'clock to begin the count of the Second ward.

MEETING OF THAYER DIVISION.

Thayer Division, Newport League of Good Citizenship, held its monthly meeting yesterday afternoon, Miss Maud Stevens in charge and President Louis Hobbs in the chair. After the reading of the minutes of the last meeting by Miss Elizabeth Hammett in the absence of the secretary, Miss Rose McCool, the Good Order committee reported 100 pieces of rubbish picked up about the premises and in the school building during the past month.

The following city ordinance to be reported on next month was copied in the children's text-books: "Bicycles shall not be ridden on sidewalks, nor shall any child under five years old be carried on a bicycle." Last year the history of old Newport was studied as far as the American Revolution and this year the work begins at that point. Notes were taken on Miss Stevens's talk yesterday afternoon, since at the close of the year essays on the winter's work are to be written and prizes will be awarded. Before the meeting adjourned Miss Barbara Taylor, principal of Thayer, announced that the Civic League would present a prize to the school in Newport which shows the greatest improvement.

OVER DOZEN SHOTS FIRED.

Policeman in Pittsfield, Me., Has Pistol Duel with Burglars.

PITTSFIELD, Me., Dec. 2.—Night Watchman M. C. Corey had a pistol duel with two or more professional burglars early today, after they had entered three stores. More than a dozen shots were fired, but without effect, except that one bullet passed through the right shoulder of the officer's coat, without injury to him.

The officer discovered the men in the drug store of H. H. Nutter, and they escaped from the rear. He gave chase and the shooting followed, the officer taking a lively part in it. The burglars dropped some of the stolen articles as they ran. They smashed the cash register in the drug store, but obtained only a few cents. From the Estes cigar store they secured $60 worth of cigars and pipes and some change from Miss Day's millinery store.

During the mornings six or seven suspects were rounded up in an attempt to capture the burglars, but the officers did not think they had the right ones.

WILL MAKE WAR LESS LIKELY.

Major Squier on Aeronautics at Engineers' Meeting in New York.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Finding an exhaustive review of the subject of aeronautics with the argument that aerial navigation will make war less likely than it has been hitherto, Major G. O. Squier of the signal corps of the United States army evoked spirited applause at the second day's session of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers here today.

The program for the business meeting of the society today included the election of officers for the ensuing year.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 2.—Rev. The resignation will probably take effect at the close of the present college term.

DISPOSES OF CRITICISMS.

Capps's Report Largely Devoted to North Dakota and Delaware.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The annual report of Rear Admiral W. L. Capps, chief constructor of the navy, is very largely devoted to a review of the controversy over the plans of battleships North Dakota and Delaware. Admiral Capps disposes of various phases of criticisms which have been made of the plans by declaring that the recommendation for changes made by the Newport conference related only to minor details, over which there naturally would be differences of opinion and improvement from time to time.

Estimates for the construction and repair of vessels at navy yards and on foreign stations amount to $5,849,713—an increase of $840,711 over the appropriations for the current fiscal year. The amount estimated for "increase of the navy, construction and machinery," for work for new vessels authorized by Congress, is $14,540,753, the amount appropriated for the current fiscal year being $12,832,962. For continuing work on submarine torpedo boats, the construction and limit of cost of which already have been authorized by Congress, an estimate is made of $1,800,000, the amount appropriated for the current year being $2,000,000, and for work on two fleet colliers heretofore authorized the estimate is $3,100,000, the appropriation for the current fiscal year being $1,600,000.

A strong recommendation is made in favor of limiting the extent to which old vessels are modernized. Admiral Capps says it is believed it will be more advantageous to expend money in the construction of vessels of the latest design.

ESCAPED WITH $14,000.

Burglars' Work in Pepperell Bank Skilful and Thorough.

PEPPERELL, Mass., Dec. 2.—Fourteen thousand dollars in cash was secured by burglars who early today blew open the vault of the First National Bank here. The thoroughness and skill with which the work was performed leads to the belief on the part of the police that the burglars were professionals. Three men were in the party, and although they were seen escaping in an automobile, all trace of them was soon lost, and the authorities were unable to ascertain in which direction they departed. It is believed, however, that the burglars went from here to Groton.

The break was effected about 2 o'clock, at which time the last of three explosions was heard by Ernest Tarbell, who was sleeping next door. The two earlier detonations had been heard by him and roused him from his bed, but, being muffled, he was uncertain as to their origin. The third, however, was less guarded, and was followed by a crash and a rattle, as the vault door fell away and the interior glass fittings were broken. Tarbell reached his door after arming himself with a revolver, only to find it barred from the outside. He succeeded in breaking it open after some time, and immediately went to the door of the bank. He reached there just as the robbers were starting off in their automobile, and, after shouting an alarm, he fired several shots at the fleeing party. The shots were fired at a distance of about 20 feet, but whether any of them took effect in the person of the robbers is unknown, as no traces of blood were found in the vicinity. Tarbell followed the automobile for some distance along the main street, but was soon distanced, although he went far enough to be reasonably certain that the machine took the road to Groton.

BROKERS OFFER 37-16 CENTS.

Fall River Not Able to Secure Much Print Goods at That Price.

FALL RIVER, Dec. 2.—Brokers representing M. C. D. Borden were today offering 3 7-16 cents for print cloths, an advance of one-sixteenth of a cent on the quotation. The offer is for delivery within the next few weeks, but since the market is well sold through December and January Mr. Borden's brokers are not able to secure any considerable amount of goods at the price offered. The demand for print cloths has been heavy recently, and mills which will have looms released from contracts very soon are not disposed to tie them up again at once at the current prices.

ARKANSAS RISING RAPIDLY.

Large Sections of Bank of River at Pine Bluff Falling in.

PINE BLUFF, Dec. 2.—The Arkansas river reached a stage of 23 feet early today, and is rising rapidly. The bank of the river in the rear of the Jefferson Hotel and county court house began falling into the river in large sections this morning. The court house annex has been vacated.

CASE UNDER ADVISEMENT.

Argument Concluded in Fight to Have Thaw Taken to Pittsburg.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 2.—The fight to have Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, taken from Matteawan asylum in New York state to Pittsburg, for the purpose of appearing in bankruptcy proceedings there, was resumed in the United States circuit court of appeals here today, when former Governor Stone of Pittsburg, counsel for Roger O'Mara, trustee of Thaw's estate in bankruptcy, continued his argument, began yesterday. Mr. Stone, who filed the petition taking the case to the appellate court, wants that tribunal to review the decision of Judge Young of the United States court for the Western district of Pennsylvania, who dismissed a writ of habeas corpus and testificandum granted during Judge Young's absence in Europe by Judge Archbald of the United States court for the Middle district of Pennsylvania. The bankruptcy proceedings were originally brought in Judge Young's court.

Counsel for New York state, which is opposing the efforts to have Thaw taken to Pittsburg, declares that the desire to have Thaw appear in Pittsburg is only a sham, and that the Thaw interests have some other object in view. This is resented by Mr Stone.

Argument was concluded today, and the court held the case under advisement.

SPECULATION FURIOUS.

St. Louis & San Francisco Plan Precipitates Rock Island Dealings.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Furious speculation in Rock Island preferred was precipitated in the stock market early today by rumors that an important plan had been perfected for financing the needs of the St. Louis & San Francisco, a subsidiary company. At the same time reports were sent from the West that new projects were forming for a different organization of the Gould group of properties.

Kuhn Loeb & Co said the financing of the St. Louis & San Francisco had been under consideration by them, but that recently the company informed them it wished to dispose of its 5 per cent general lien bonds to others, and Kuhn Loeb & Co.'s connection with the operation ceased.

A statement by Speyer & Co. disclosed that firm as the buyer of a large block of the bonds, and a formal announcement by the company to that effect was expected to be made during the day.

SARDINES 22 PER CENT SHORT.

Outlook for Next Season Depends on Outcome of Maine Inquiry.

LUBEC, Me., Dec. 2.—The sardine pack for the season of 1908, which officially closed Monday, fell short 22 per cent from the amount allotted by the Maine Mercantile Company, which is in control of 95 per cent of the business. This was said to be due to differences with the fishermen during the early part of the season.

As a result of the falling off in prices offered by the trade, the packers have been storing heavily, and every available storehouse is filled, but even at that there probably will be no more goods than the trade will demand this winter and next spring, as the mid-season buying was light because of the general condition of trade.

The Maine Mercantile Company expected to pack 1,800,000 cases, but, instead, produced 1,404,000. The independent factories packed 90,000 cases. There are 300,000 cases in storage. The present price for quarter oils is $3.10 and for three-quarter mustards $2.85, for Labse or Eastport.

The outlook for next season, it is said, will depend somewhat on the outcome of the present investigation of the affairs and methods of the Maine Mercantile Company by the federal grand jury, now convened in Portland.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2, Wall Street—The stock market opened strong with Amalgamated Copper at 85, American Smelting 93½, American Locomotive 66½, Anaconda 50⅞, Atchison 99, Baltimore & Ohio 107⅞, Canadian Pacific 176½, Chesapeake & Ohio 49¾, Erie 33½, Great Northern preferred 139⅞, Missouri Pacific 66, Missouri, Kansas & Texas 39¼, Consolidated Gas 165¾, National Lead 83½, Northern Pacific 142, Rock Island 24⅝, Rock Island preferred 58⅞ to 60, St. Paul 152½, Reading 139⅝, Southern Pacific 119⅜, Union Pacific 182½, United States Steel 55⅝, United States Steel preferred 119 and Wabash preferred 35.

11—Excited buying of the Rock Island stocks was accompanied by rumors of financial relief for St. Louis & San Francisco, which caused a tremendous absorption of Rock Island preferred, which jumped 3½ to 61¾. The Gould stocks were also heavily bought, but the general list moved within comparatively narrow limits. Heavy selling of the general market began when the advance in the Rock Island group had reached its climax and a number of the active stocks were forced below yesterday's closing. The Rock Island and Gould groups were up from 1 to 3 points.

Noon—Money on call, firm, at 2 per cent; prime mercantile paper, 3¾ @ 4½ per cent. With a lull in the selling movement, prices were bid up again in spots, but the general response was not vigorous. The Rock Island collateral bonds were very active and strong, but the general bond market was irregular.

Epworth League's Sale and Supper, Held in Parlors of Methodist Church, a Success.

[Regular correspondence to the News.]

The annual sale by the members of the Epworth League last evening, in the parlors of the Methodist Episcopal Church, received a liberal patronage. From 6 to 8 o'clock a supper consisting of oyster stew and cold meats was served in the dining room under the direction of Mrs. A. Herbert Ward and Mrs. James H. Barker, assisted by the members of the Ladies' Aid. The serving was done from five tables, each seating 10, which were many times filled. The supper was pronounced excellent and many favorable comments were heard on the convenience and attractiveness of the various departments of the new building.

In the large Sunday School room a long table was attractively arranged with a large and varied assortment of useful and fancy articles, which were nearly all sold. Mrs. Walter Barker and Miss Lydia Peabody were in charge, assisted by Mrs. H. H. Critchlow. In the smaller primary room adjoining Miss Mary D. Smith and Mrs. Elma Peckham presided at the candy and cake table; jellies were also sold here. Miss Helen Ward conducted the puzzle table, where a handsome variety of jig-saw puzzles attracted much attention and found a ready sale. The puzzles were the handiwork of Miss Nettie Harvey of Newport. The ice cream table was in charge of Mr. James H. Barker, assisted by Mr. William L. Brown, and the supper tickets in charge of Mr. William J. Peckham. The reception parlor formed an inviting "rest-corner," with its cheerful fire of blazing logs.

At 8:20 the company adjourned to the auditorium, where a well rendered program was given in the form of an organ recital by Mr. C. Le Roy Grinnell of Providence, with readings by Mr. Fred P. Webber of Newport. Mr. Grinnell's "Evening Song" by Schumann and Lemare's "Andantino in D Flat" were received with especial favor. The eight numbers were well presented. Mr. Webber is somewhat of an old friend and always finds an appreciative audience in Middletown. His selection included "Nathan Leading the Choir," from Joe Crosby Lincoln's "Cape Cod Ballads," with a short humorous story as an encore; "John W. Jones, the Homeliest Man in Town," by Holman Day, with "The Village Oracle" as an encore; "The Reformation of Billy Maddison," by Ellis Parker Butler, with encore, "Left." Mr. Grinnell also gave a humorous selection "No news that killed the dog."

Numerous guests were present from Newport including Rev. and Mrs. W. F. Geisler of the Thames Street Methodist Church. The new church was viewed with interest and pleasure by many who had previously been unable to attend since the opening. There seems to be but one general verdict: that the new edifice is exceedingly attractive and conveniently arranged in every particular.

Mrs. Lydia R. Chase has recently returned from a week's visit with her niece, Mrs. Joseph E. Farnum, in Providence.

Mrs. H. H. Critchlow will leave tomorrow for a three week's visit in Boston, Winchester, and New Bedford. Her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hoxsans of Somerset, Mass., will remain at the parsonage during her absence.

Through the kindness of Mrs. T. J. Emery, the walls of St. Columba's guild room at the Berkeley parish house have been tinted a delicate green. A similar decoration was contributed by Miss Frances Arnold and her sister, Mrs. Arthur Rogers, in the room of the men's club, the fittings of which were given by them as a memorial to their mother, Louise Gindrat Arnold.

LITTLE INTEREST IN THE RECOUNT.

The State Returning Board completed the counting of 10 districts, including the first three wards of Pawtucket, yesterday afternoon. This leaves only 27 more to be counted in order to finish the vote of the entire state. At the rate the count has progressed the work should be finished by the end of this week.

Few changes were discovered in the count yesterday between the figures of the election officers and those of the board. The afternoon was bare of feature and the monotonous click-click of the machines made dull accompaniment to the sing-song of the members as they called off the names on the several ballots.

Little interest was manifested in the count by the politicians, no one but the members of the board, the tabulators, clerks and the reporters being in attendance during the latter part of the afternoon.

HENRY GLADDING.

Death of a Well Known Resident, Formerly for Several Years Harbor Master and Health Officer.

Former Harbor Master Henry Gladding died early this morning at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Ernest Boudreau, on Thurston avenue, of diseases incident to old age. He had been in poor health since last summer, but had been confined to the house only a comparatively short time. He was 78 years old, and having been born in Newport had spent his entire life here, having been engaged in maritime pursuits of various character, being a sailmaker by trade.

He succeeded the late Nicholas Alger in the boat-renting business and his shop on Long Wharf was a well known place among the residents of the Point, who gathered in summer and winter to talk over old times, tell sea stories and enjoy the hospitality of their host. In the summer the gathering place was on the pier facing the harbor, where everything going on could be seen; later in the autumn the lower shop was the scene of the daily gatherings, and in winter the second story found many regular and occasional visitors, mornings and afternoons.

Mr. Gladding was for several years harbor master and health officer, and an efficient and obliging official. He leaves a son, Mr. Wanton Gladding of New Bedford, and two daughters, Mrs. Boudreau of this city and Mrs. William Elgar of New Rochelle, N. Y. A brother, Mr. Martin H. Gladding, and a sister, Mrs. Phoebe King, also survive.

AWAITING THE RESULTS.

From what others say the telephone was ringing long after that. Of course many of the questions asked might well have been left out on such a busy night. Now and then the person seeking information would give a name, but this was seldom, and the man at the other end of the line remains in ignorance of the identity of the persons who are so ignorant of election ways as to ask such questions as they propounded, when it was difficult enough to keep the pace set by the continuous run of calls. Women inquirers as to how the election had gone seemed to be in greater proportion to the whole than usual.

Many persons calling in did not know that the aldermen were being voted for in all the wards and so could not understand when the vote from the First ward was in why it could not be told who had been elected alderman from that ward. Of course the office was asked to make all sorts of guesses on the effect of the vote in one ward upon the result in the city. There were many who seemed to imagine the office had a schedule as to just what time the returns would be in from the various wards and persistently asked when certain returns could be expected. Many who called, said they wished the full figures of the returns, but often did not have paper at hand to take them down, and of course could not remember a long string of figures. Others, while saying they desired figures were soon found to really wish returns, and thus it was that many were delayed in getting their calls.

At the city election in 1907 only 62.5 per cent of the names on the list were voted. This was largely due to lack of interest in the election by the registry voters, who had nothing to vote for. At the election last November the percentage voting was 86.3, a large one, but then it was for President. In yesterday's election 75.2, very close to 80 per cent of the possible votes, were cast. By wards the percentages were: First 77.9, Second 82.6, Third 79.9, Fourth 74.8, Fifth 79.5. It was probably as large a vote as could well be expected under the circumstances, as the workers say the voters came out with less prompting than is ordinarily necessary, showing that the constant iteration of the statement that it is the duty of every man who has a vote to cast the vote has had its effect on many who were inclined to omit voting and then complain because things did not go their way.

HOPE HIGH WAS AFRAID.

Manager of Rogers Football Team Says Providence Boys Didn't Dare Play.

To the Editor of the News:

It is interesting to note the thinly veiled sarcasm with which the Hope High School management refers to the Rogers High School as a second-rate team. However, a statement of the facts will easily dispell any doubt regarding the "quitting spirit" of the Hope manager in refusing repeatedly to meet the Rogers team.

As the Hope management admits, the Rogers manager has tried several times to get a game with Hope, but in the first instance Hope claimed a full schedule, and then on the following morning published their schedule in a Providence paper with two open dates. The Rogers management called Hope's attention to this fact and offered to give Hope any date they chose to name. Again Hope pleaded a full schedule. Again last Friday Rogers tried to arrange a game, but the excuse was a disbanded team. Later we learned that Hope had forgotten all about the full schedule, disbanded team, and all the other excuses they made, and were to play Waltham. Then Hope picked up a team, composed of their best men and four more from Brown and other places, and played Waltham, winning 1 to 6.

The facts are these: Hope didn't care to play Rogers because she didn't dare to play, and tried by every possible means to avoid meeting her on the field. From a Hope standpoint this was all right, for she knew that in all probability a meeting between the teams would be very disastrous to her team. On the other hand, the quitting, excuse making and unsportsmanlike spirit she showed was no credit to any team, and shows again clearly that Hope did not play Rogers simply because she did not dare to.

The Rogers' record this season shows that she only has lost one school game and has beaten two teams on which Hope could not score. Now the Rogers has challenged Hope, the self claimed champions of New England to a game and she has flatly refused to accept, for reasons stated above.

These facts show that Hope cannot be the championship team of the state until she has played with Rogers. This she will not do, and this is where Rogers bases her claim upon the state championship. This I believe any fair-minded reader will admit.
